The Coat of Arms of Frederick Hendricksen van LEEUWEN is illustrated in full color on page 210 in a huge Dutch Volume found in the major Genealogical Libraries and entitled -

Stam - En Wapenboek
van Aanzienlijke - Nederlandsche Familien
A. A. Vorsterman van Oyen

To reproduce it in color in this book is prohibitive cost wise. To enable you to visualize it, here are the colors.

The Lion of the Crest is white - shaded in gray. His tongue, claws and wings are a deep red.

The Crown is burnished gold.

The Helmet steel gray - with a golden pendant.

The Mantle surrounding the Helmet is dark red lined in white. (red portions shown in very dark Gray on sketch)

The Shield is white - its inverted V is red and the three designs thereon in gold.

The Supporting Lions are medium tan with red tongues and claws.

The Leaf scroll at the base is blueish Green.

FORWARD

by the AUTHOR

Between the ages of ten and twelve, I attended school from the home of an uncle living in New Brunswick, New Jersey. When driving home in a carriage one time, and on passing the Raritan Landing a mile above New Brunswick, I was told by my father that our forebears had lived two or three miles from that spot during the Revolutionary War. My father went on to say that his own grandfather Denyse, who had fought in the Revolution, had told him how the Hessians would often come to their home and take all the bread from the Dutch ovens and, as they were about to sit down to eat, and even all the food off the table, leaving them nothing. This, in connection with other accounts of the Revolution told my father by his grandfather Denyse, and combined with the first reading at that time of Motley's "Rise of the Dutch Republic", which was in my uncle's library, early awakened a desire to know more of those days and, in particular, of that part of New Jersey.

The Bible of our immediate family held our own records going back to my great-grandfather Denyse. Also, shortly after the above incident I learned that Denyse's father was Johannes who had married Dorothy Lott, and I had the dates of their births, marriage and deaths. For several years I knew of no forebears further back than these two.

A very good friend of the family, a Colonel Abram T. Huff, was keenly interested in all matters genealogical, and had what seemed to me a tremendous fund of knowledge. With him I had long discussions on this subject and that of the history of the earlier days. He tried to help me find out from whom Johannes and Dorothy Lott were descended, thereby endeavoring to get back to the earliest van Liew in America. It is thanks to Colonel Huff's interest in a subject congenial to us both and to his interest in me, that a little later, when between the ages of 16 and 18 I received a gift from him. This was the ancient Dutch Bible of Hendrick van Lawa, which - having had the opportunity to buy it, he presented to me thinking it would provide the answer we were seeking. How and where he located this Bible is related under "Hendrick, and his Descendants". (Also see Page 111. ERvL, 1956)

In the interim, I had learned that Johannes' father was named Frederick and it was not long before I knew that this Frederick was not the Frederick of the Old Bible, recorded as the son of Hendrick - its original owner.

For many years the mystery of the original ownership of this Bible and what line of van Liews it recorded both baffled and intrigued me. During these years I was either in the Rockies or living abroad, mostly in Russia -- (the Author was General Manager of the Caucasus Copper Co. Ltd. prior to WW1. ERvL-1956) --and had no opportunity of carrying the investigation further. It was always my intention, however to solve the riddle of the Old Bibles original ownership, when the opportunity presented itself.

On an enforced visit to this country in 1915 -- through being unable to get back to Russia from France where we were caught when World War I began -- I learned that during the eight and a half years I had been absent since my last visit, my brother had joined the Holland Society of New York. I called at their headquarters to get the data he had presented in his application and at the same time found there the data presented by Henry A. Van Liew (7F215), which was my first accurate knowledge therein confirmed, that we had sprung from Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen, immigrant of 1670.

Returning to Russia again after a few months the matter rested until 1921 when, after a total absence of eighteen years, I returned to this country for good.

I thereupon resolved, for the sake of my sons both of whom had been born abroad, to get together as much data as possible pertaining to our forebears in America. I started in by visiting cemeteries and examining the original, safe-preserved records of early Somerset and Middlesex County churches. I also consulted all the published documents, papers and records of the New York Historical Society pertaining to the early New York, Long Island and Staten Island churches and other official records to be found in the Genealogical Section (Room 328) of the New York Public Library and at the headquarters of the Holland Society.

At this time, through the courtesy of Dennis J. Van Liew (7F225) of Des Moines, to whom I am greatly indebted, I received his own line as well as a copy of the valuable little volume of Thomas L. Van Liew's (7F185) "Genealogy and Annals of the Van Liew Family". From the latter I established for the first time the identity of the Hendrick Van Lawa whose Bible I had owned the past thirty years and whose descendants had not made an entry therein for some seventy years previous to the time it was presented to me, or since 1824.

Most of the data pertaining to the different line of van Liews as given in the following pages were collected between the years 1921 and 1935. For assistance during those years I am likewise indebted to Mrs. John S. Clark for the very full and complete data pertaining to the descendants of her great grandfather Frederick (4F24) van Liew; to Denice Van Liew (7F196) of East Orange, N.J., for the data on his branch; to Samuel C. Schenck for most of the data on the descendants of his grandmother Rachael Van Liew (5F59) and to the late Miss Elizabeth Van Liew (5F35) for having kept a Journal which was published in the Somerset County Quarterly to be found at the New Jersey Historical Society's Headquarters in Newark.

The other data here recorded have been compiled with an expenditure of much greater labor and time than on that obtained above.

The difficulty has been that the Church records were not accurately kept in the early days of this country. In some instances marriages and baptisms were apparently not recorded at all by the Dominies, or Ministers of the time. Very often, as was so common then, they did not record the surname; simply, for a baptism, say "Jan, Jan Fredricksen and Altje".

The first church south of the Raritan - stated by some to have been the first in New Jersey - was the one located at Three-Mile-Run where a little cemetery exists today, and which is known to have existed as early as 1703. No records of this church exist at all. The churches formed from this one, at New Brunswick and Six-Mile-Run (a little further down the present Route 27, at the site now occupied by what is known as the Elm Ridge Cemetery of Franklin Park) have records from 1717 and 1743 respectively. These records are incomplete. In connection with this Mrs. Clark tells me that the Six-Mile-Run records were kept at the house of one of the Consistory. This house was burned and the records with it.

To make such an undertaking more difficult, even the Dutch families did not seem particular to enter all their children's births in their family Bibles. In this Bible of Hendrick's, his son Frederick entered the births of only some of his children. Another feature that has complicated research is that sometimes a family would have one child baptised at New Brunswick, a second child at Middlebush and a third at Six-Mile-Run. All these problems made the building up of the different families something like putting together the proverbial "Chinese Puzzle".

Where such families have had to be built up through the church records of marriages and baptisms some are bound to be incomplete, for unless extremely certain of where they belonged I have not used the names in the church records.

It is hoped that succeeding generations will preserve and keep their family records up-to-date.

--- and ONWARD

Although I had been exposed to this project since my thirteenth year, in my mind it was always Dad's all-consuming hobby. When his original manuscript was finished in the early 1940's, I accepted my copy, secure in the knowledge that I owned an important document I could pass on to those who would follow.

Three years after Dad's passing, a letter addressed to W. R. van Liew (no street or number), Montclair, N. J., was delivered to my house on the assumption it was for my son. Its appeal for genealogical information was so urgent that I could not help but try to answer the question. My correspondent was Mrs. Merle Van Lew Corey who had been working for many years to establish her relationship to an early Van L. Immigrant. Subsequently, she sent me her files containing data previously unknown to Dad, plus additional information that enlarged upon some of his impressions pertaining to the descendants of Johannes (2J1).

Out of sheer curiosity, I decided to contact those descendants. The ensuing mails brought in treasures of additional information, which coupled with my awareness that Thomas L. Van Liew's "Genealogy and Annals Of The Van Liew Family" was the only published Van L. record in the libraries, crystallized my decision to attempt publication of Dad's book.

The Telephone Directory Rack in the New York Public Library became the HQ for tracing the whereabouts of the clan. It did not take long to find out that those who today spell the name Van Leeuwen are "late comers" - having arrived from Holland in the 1800's and 1900's. Those who spell it Van Leuven appear to be the descendants of Andreis Pieterse van Leeuwen (listed elsewhere) who settled in the Kingston, N. Y. area and whose relationship to Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen of 1670 is unknown. Furthermore, Dad's findings that our family presently uses the Liew, Lieu and Lew spellings is rather thoroughly confirmed.

As my research progressed, I was intrigued by the numbers of the family who had spent much time searching the few published facts, - each one endeavoring to establish his line of descent. The evidence of this widespread human desire to learn something of one's background strengthened my resolve that the wealth of information in my keeping must be made available to all who wanted it, and caused me to devote almost all of my sparetime to the project since March of 1955.

Gathering facts posed only minor problems. However, the Genealogical portions of the book had to be completely rewritten in the light of new data, and the numbering system had to be changed to accommodate the newly "discovered" members whose advent increased those listed by over 100%.

With the end in sight, I feel a deep sense of satisfaction that the countless hours of Dad's labor will be available to posterity. I hope the owners of the book will keep current their family records on the extra pages provided for the purpose, so that the Van L. of the future, inspired to bring the Volume up-to-date, shall encounter no difficulties in obtaining information. In addition to working on a fascinating project, he will have the pleasure of meeting some of the finest people on earth - his Kin.

NEGROES WHO BEAR OUR NAME

Our ancestors on Long Island - and especially those in New Jersey were slave owners like other people of means. When those slaves were freed a number of them adopted the sir name of their former owners - (having no sir name of their own). We are informed that this was a compliment - for those that were maltreated were not interested in ever again hearing their owner's name. There are thus a number of such Negroe Van Liew and Van Lew families living in Newark and New Brunswick, New Jersey, and in Galveston, Texas.

Almost every old Dutch, English and French Huguenot family name is represented among the Negroes of America.

THE NUMBERING SYSTEM

Considerable thought has been given to this subject and a number of genealogies were studied before it was decided to use the system employed in this book. In reality what we have are three Genealogies between two covers - one for each of the three sons of Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen of 1670 who is the first generation and our ancestor.

Thus, Johannes, the eldest son in 2J1. The "2" preceding the code letter denotes the generation. "j", of course is his code letter, while the figure "1" denotes him to be the first of his line. But, "2J1" is his number, and all his descendants carry the code letter "J".

The same applies to Hendrick (2H1) and Frederick (2F1), and it is fortunate that FH of 1670 did not have two sons whose given names started with the same letter. As the system now stands each VL descendant has his own individual and consecutive number.

This letter code and number combination is especially convenient when studying the historical chapters, cemetery documentation, etc. for it is easy to tell at a glance as to which family the individual belongs. This is an advantage in a family that has so many Johns, Henrys and Fredericks.

Descendants whose name is not VAN L. are given the generation number but are enumerated alphabetically. The spouses have no numbers at all.

THE PLUS SIGN

A plus in front of the name of a child means that the same person is listed later as a parent in the next generation. The absence of the plus sign means that either the line has ended right there, or it has been impossible to trace it further.

To find your line of descent use the INDEX to locate yourself, and then work backward using the generation numbers to help you.

THE INDEXES

These fully cover the Genealogical sections and likewise a few van LEEUWEN names of early imigrants who to the best of our knowledge are not related to Frederick Hendricksen van LEEUWEN of 1670.

The Historical Sections, and those constituting supporting evidence for the Genealogical sections are not indexed. We deem this not necessary because they are adequately cross referenced.

The sections covering births, baptisms, marriages and cemetaries include several van L's not listed in the Genealogical Sections for the reason they could not be positively identified. The researcher is therefore advised to study these carefully.

BACKGROUND IN EUROPE

The AUTHOR'S father was twenty three years old when his father's father, Denyse (4F26) of Woodfern died. Denyse was hale and active in his 94th year his death having come about not thru old age or sickness, but rather from sunstroke acquired while driving a colt to a breaking sulky for some distance during a hot July day. Incidentally, tho' he died in 1857 he persisted in wearing knickers, silk stockings and low shoes with silver buckles on formal occasions, - the style of the Revolutionary War days.

Denyse told his grandson much that related to his youth in the Light Horse of the Revolution and of the traditions of the Family that had been handed down from Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen of 1670 to his son Frederick (2F1) - who was the first to come to New Jersey - to Johannes (3F8), - thence to Denyse. Denyse then, was not so far removed from F.H. of 1670 in the two intervening generations, as not to have received a rather accurate concept of these traditions of the Family's origin.

As told by Denyse to the AUTHOR'S father and as related in turn to the AUTHOR, the family was of "French origin", that they had fled to Holland because of religious persecution. Their first stop was Amsterdam where F.H. of 1670 had relatives living when he left Utrecht for New York, - and that later some of the family had gone to Utrecht where Frederick's parents were living after his departure.

Denyse told his grandson that the family had been in what is now known as the Kingdom of Holland (the Netherlands) for about one hundred years prior to F.H.'s departure in 1670 and that in the year 1570 they had been silk manufacturers and people of means. Further more they had acquired much wealth in Holland and were interested as executives as well as financially in both the Dutch East and West India Companies. Such, briefly is the History of the Family as passed on from father to son and as the AUTHOR learned it in his youth.

To connect the tradition of "French Origin" with either France as we know or think of France today, - or with the French speaking Belgians of today the AUTHOR'S original manuscript devoted sixteen pages to the condensation of the Political and Religious situation that prevailed in France, Germany and the Netherlands during that one hundred year period. Those pages are not very pleasant reading.

Since the AUTHOR'S conclusions are quite completely set forth in the ensuing chapter and since the events affected not only our Family but all Protestants of the Netherlands, the Co-Author feels it inappropriate to review the details of how the Roman Catholic Church aided by the inherently cruel Spanish temperament committed what have gone down in History as some of the most heinous wholesale crimes perpetrated against MAN in the Name of the Saviour. Any one wishing to pursue this further may refer to the Encyclopaedia Britannica under Alva & Torquemada or better still to the "History of the United Netherlands" by John Lathrop Motley (American Historian) and "History of the People of the Netherlands" by Petrus Johannes Blok, Professor of Dutch History, University of Leyden.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME

In his "Genealogy and Annals of the Van Liew Family", Thomas L. Van Liew gives the origin of the name Van Liew as derived originally from Leeuwen, in Gelderland, one of the States of the Netherlands. In allusions to the name, as found in the Somerset Quarterly, and elsewhere in print, apparently on the authority of Thomas L. Van Liew, this origin is held.

Undoubtedly, Thomas L. Van Liew's acceptance of Leeuwen is on the authority of the earliest recorded church records in this country, where, when Frederick's (of 1670) marriage was recorded in 1681, also his children's baptisms later, his name was recorded - "Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen of Utrecht", or in subsequent baptisms, as Van Leeuwn or Van Leuwen. Acceptance of Leeuwen, and the deduction that it must have been taken from Leeuwen in Gelderland was therefore natural.

Much thought has been given to this question of the origin of the name and considerable reading has been done to throw light on the matter.

Bergen refers to Frederick of 1670 as of "French Origin". The writer has also read in other printed references to our family as to its being of "French Origin". This coincides with his own information received as a boy from his father, as a tradition handed down from his father to son. Looking over a year book of the Holland Society that gives the ships and the passengers of the Dutch West India Company to 1664, there was noted a "Thomas Van Leeuwen (French)".

The question arises - if the family was French in origin and fled to Holland about 100 years before Frederick came to America in 1670, as told the writer by his father, and, if they fled first to Amsterdam and later part of them went to Utrecht - how could they have had their origin, or lived, in Leeuwen which is in Gelderland and one of the purely Dutch provinces of the Netherlands.

Refugees, as we have seen from those of the relatively recent Russian Revolution, do not seek a small village like Leeuwen, where no means - except agriculture - of earning a living and starting a new life exists, but go to some large city where there is greater opportunity.

We know that our forbears went to Amsterdam, that their interests were city interests - business, not agriculture, as would have been the necessity in a small place like Leeuwen.

Another question arises with this one as to the origin of the name--what did our forbears mean by "French Origin"?

To try to answer, let us go back four to five hundred years before the family fled to Amsterdam, or to about the year 1000. At this time, the whole country that we know as the 17 States comprising the Netherlands of 1570, was known as Friesland. The seat of the government, the palace, the Ruler, lived at Leeuwarden, the capital of the present State known as Friesland. Then, Holland was not known, it taking its name later from a Count of Holland. Then all the people spoke the Frisian language, the nearest to English of any language, many of the words being the same. There was no difference between the Dutch and the Flemish languages in 1570.

We know that in 1570, the approximate date they fled, the city of Leuven (what we know of as Louvain) was celebrated for its silk industry. It is a tradition the family were engaged in this industry before they had to flee. Twenty miles east of Leuven was the city of LEAU, then with Mechlin, one of the two chief cities for the internal trade of the country, later ruined it never recovered, became later a fortress town and is now a place of 2,000 inhabitants, and to be seen on any good map of Belgium. Leuven and Leau both lay north of that line, but near it, that separates the Flemish from the Walloon French both Leuven and Leau being on the Flemish side of the line. The Flemish name for Leau is Zout - Leeuw (Salt-Lion).

We thus have four places, Leeuwarden, Leeuwen, Leeuw-St. Pierre (near Brussels) and Zout-Leeuw or LEAU near Leuven (Louvain) that that are variations of Leeuw, from which it is possible the name may have been derived - as to an inhabited place.

Leeuw means in Dutch and Flemish - "LION" en means in Dutch and Flemish - "of" or "from"

Leeuwen means of or from a Lion
Leeuwen is pronounced "Layven"

Leeuw is pronounced "La oo"

LEAU, with the accent, is pronounced in French - "Lay-oh"

The "V" in "Van" is very soft - almost an "f" sound, but not as soft as in the German "Von".

Of the above four places having "Leeuw" in their names, Leeuwarden is the farthest north, while Leeuwen is in the north in Gelderland and became later one of the States comprising what we call the Kingdom of Holland, and the other two are in present day Belgium.

Leeuwarden's name is composed of two words "Leeuw" meaning "Lion" and "Warden" meaning land that is subject to overflow.

The writer has seen a Dutch History, in Dutch, owned by the Rev. van der Kam in which Leeuwarden is spelled 200 different official ways. There are some three pages that give the spellings, the places taken from, the dates. These start about the year 1100 and come down to modern times. One of these spellings is "Leau", another about 1580, is "Liew", others "Loo", "Lue", "Lew", etc., etc. The Rev. van der Kam, himself a Frisian, tells the writer that among the Frisians, "Leau" is the way the Frisians would spell Leeuwen today.

The Rev. van der Kam writes:-

"The Will of Frederick Hendricksen Van Leau is, as far as Van Leau is concerned, the pronounciation in Frisian of Leeuwarden. We Frisians, when asked, "Where do you come from?" "Van Leau - wed". By the way, Liewe, Prince of Orange was one, and the leader who presented Margareta van Parma with the Protest, and at Brussels refused to kneel saying "That good christians only bent their knees for God" - read Motley"

The above 200 variations in officially spelling Leeuwarden, probably explain the variations, even with the educated Dutch Dominies, in the spelling of our name. In the church records of the Six Mile Run (Franklin Park) Church, the name is spelled Leeuwen, Leuwen, Lieuwen, Lawa, Lewe, Lawen, Leau, Lieu, Loo, Lue, Liew. In one instance, two children by the same parents, baptised by the same pastor, within two years of each other, have the name spelled in two different ways.

The writer has a large Deed on Parchment, measuring 17 by 27 inches, for land bought at Woodfern, N. J. by his great grandfather Denyse Van Liew (4F26). Denyse's father, Johannes' and his brother Frederick's signatures are on this Deed, dated April 4, 1794.

Johannes (3F8) spelled his name Van Leuwen.
Frederick (4F24) spelled his name Van Lawen.
Denyse (4F26) spelled his name Van Lawen.

In later years Denyse spelled his name Van Liew.

The "French Origin" or "French Extraction" as is printed in Bergen's reference to the family by Snell in his History of Somerset County, and in the Holland Society Year Book, refer, in the writer's belief, not to French blood or nationality, not even necessarily to their being Walloon French - as were the Cortelyous, the De Nyses, etc. All Huguenots in those days (from 1570 on) may have been known to the Hollanders by the general title of Walloons. As appearing to favor this theory, it was customary in Holland in those days to distinguish churches in their midst erected by French Huguenots, by the name "WAALE KERKIN" or Walloon Churches. In the same way it was probably customary for Hollanders to speak of Refugee Huguenots from the Southern Netherland Provinces as of "French Origin", meaning not necessarily that they were Walloon French or "French French", but that in general, they came from the Southern States where the French language predominated.

Frederick Hendricksen Van Liew's (1670) name is purely ancient Frisian or later Dutch or Flemish. His sons' names, Johannes, Hendrick, Frederick are also Dutch or Flemish. At that time there was no difference between the Dutch and Flemish languages.

We conclude, therefore, that IN 1570 THE FAMILY WAS FLEMISH, that they came from the southern states of the Netherlands, and hence the tradition of being of "French Origin", which, referred to the locality and not to the blood or nationality. The name could have been derived even farther back than 1570 from Leeuwarden in Friesland, from Leeuwen in Gelderland, both in the north, or from Leeuw- St. Pierre near Brussels, or from LEAU (French name) (Zout-Leau) Flemish name) near Leuven (Louvain) in Belgium.

Subsequent to writing the above on the "Origin of the name Van Liew" the writer has had a reply from Utrecht, the Netherlands, where a couple of months previously, he had on the advice of the Rev. van der Kam, written the Department of Ancient Archives, relating what he knew of the family in the Netherlands, and asking them if they could throw any light on the origin of the name or secure from the old archives, the date of the birth of Frederick of 1670, either from the old Walloon church still existant, since before 1600, or from the birth or baptismal records of the early Dutch Churches. The reply came in July 1931 from "OUD-ARCHIEF DER GEMEENTE UTRECHT" dated June 30, 1931 at Utrecht, signed by "The Archivist of the town" W. C. Schuylenberg. It reads--

"In answer to your letter of May 6th I beg to inform you as follows:

The tradition that the family van Leeuwen should be of "French origin" seems to me not to be just. The name is not French at all and already four and five centuries ago families of the name van Leeuwen occurred frequently in these countries.

In the middle ages (c.1400) there was a castle, named "Huis te Leeuwen", situated in the neighborhood of the villages Wamel and Druten in the province Guelders. This castle is said to be the origin of the noble family van Leeuwen. Near that castle there was also a hamlet of the name Leeuwen. This may have been the origin of other families of that name.

There has also been a castle "Huis te Leeuwen" in the province South-Holland in the neighborhood of Alphen near Leiden. This was built before 1450 and burned down in 1619. This castle too may have been the origin of one or more families of the name van Leeuwen.

Concerning your ancestor Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen, who should be born about 1650, his certificate of baptism has not been found in the registers of this town.

About that time, however, there lived at Utrecht, two persons named Hendrick van Leeuwen. One of them married with Helena van der Poll, had no son of the name of Frederick. The names of the children of the other Hendrick are not all known: two of his daughters were named Maria and Henrica, one son was named Gerrit. And some years before we find also a Frederick van Leeuwen who was 1593-1612 one of the canons of the chapter of St. Peter At Utrecht."

THE IMMIGRANT

Six years before Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen arrived in New York, a British Fleet that Governor Stuyvesant had had word of as being directed against another destination, suddenly appeared in the harbor of New York, then New Amsterdam, and in the midst of peace between England and Holland, demanded the surrender of the place. Caught unprepared, defenceless, with the Burghers against him because of his arrogance and high handedness, Stuyvesant was obliged to surrender, the people of the place joyfully accepting the more liberal terms offered by the English. The Dutch immigration to the Colony then virtually ceased.

Re-named New York it was under the English Governor Lovelace when Frederick arrived in 1670. When he arrived there were not 10,000 inhabitants, European and native born whites, from Albany to the Delaware, in what had been New Netherlands. A settlement existed at Albany, and a few scattered ones down the Hudson. Jaques Cortelyou had made the first official survey and map of New York, when it contained 350 houses, a few years before Frederick's arrival. In the vicinity of New Dorp, Staten Island, a few settlements had been made by Waldensians and Huguenots. Not a single settlement had been made in New Jersey which lay, an unbroken forest threaded in places by paths used by its 2,000 Indian inhabitants who were ruled by twenty petty kings, the most powerful being the King of the Raritans whose stronghold lay on the Shannock (Neshanic) Mountain.

The Indians to the north of New York City belonged to the Five Nations who were much fiercer than those of Long Island and New Jersey, so that, first the western end of Long Island, and later New Jersey, because of its friendly Indians and its milder climate, became the more popular districts for settlement. Frederick went to Jamaica, Long Island where he settled, lived and died.

Frederick was in this country eleven years before he married. If he married when he was thirty one years old, he was a youth of twenty when he arrived in the country, which would make the year of his birth about 1650.

We do not know if he had any relatives in this country when he came. There was a Jan Frederick Van Leeuwen also of Utrecht who married Altje Jans, and who emigrated in 1652, who was an intimate friend if not a relative, as we find that Frederick of 1670 frequently acted as Witness in the Baptisms of Jan Frederick's children before Frederick of 1670 married, and later, the two men and their wives who the writer believes to have been sisters, frequently officiated as Witnesses, each family for the other, at the baptisms of the children of the two families.*

That Frederick of 1670 had a house, and lands, and meadows, and an inherited Estate in Holland, we know from his Will.

* Note addendum at base of page 15

Since he was able to give his son Frederick some 1200/1300 acres of land in New Jersey, and as he had two other sons and five daughters, eight children in all to provide for we gather he must have had considerable property in this country quite apart from the "Estate in Holland".

When Frederick (2F1), the youngest of Frederick's (of 1670) three sons was about seven years old there began the first one of New Jersey's "Developments". East Jersey had been privately owned by Sir George Carteret. When he died in 1679, East Jersey was sold by his executors for 3400 English pounds to William Penn and II companions, who, immediately, sold each a half interest to 12 other associates, these becoming the "24 Proprietors" we studied about in our Histories. Each of the 24 had thousands of acres of lands over which they held sway until 1701/1702. Reed's Map of 1685 in the New Jersey Hist. Soc., shows the territory and the owners.

The first Dutch that came to New Jersey settled at the mouth of the Raritan, in 1683. In 1684, the land along the south bank of the Raritan, between New Brunswick and Bound Brook, was divided into the "Raritan Lots", each having a half mile of river frontage and being two miles deep, containing approximately 650/675 acres each. John Inians & Co. bought the two lots farthest down the river, covered now by the city of New Brunswick. See p.20

John Harrison of Flushing, L. I. purchased direct from the Indians, a tract west of the "Raritan Lots" above and running back to the Millstone River and nearly to Griggstown, in fact, pretty much all of what is now Franklin Township. It contained 17,500 acres and covered 27 square miles.

On November 17, 1701 a tract, known as "The Harrison Tract", consisting of nominally 10,000 acres, of actually about 10,500 acres (of the above mentioned 17,500 acres) was bought by Peter and Jaques Cortelyou (sons of the first Jaques), Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen, Garret Stoothoff, Theodore Polhymus (son of Dominie Polhymus the Immigrant), Cornelius Wyckoff (son of Peter Caes, the Immigrant), Hendrick Lott, Stoeffel Probasco and Denyse Tuennesen (father of Helena Denyse and son of Teunesse Denyse the Immigrant), or nine men in all, who were, for the most part, connected with each other by marriages, or, by blood ties. The northern boundary of this Tract was the rear of the "Raritan Lots", the Eastern was the "Indian Path" of those days, the present Lincoln Highway (1931 A.D.), and the Western boundary was the Millstone River, the "Tract" extending to the south below the present Franklin Park. Across the center, or middle of this tract, dividing it in two, and running almost north and south was the "Middle Road" that now crosses the R.R. tracks at Middlebush Station. In general, each man's "lot" ran from the Indian Path to the Millstone River and contained from 1250 to 1350 acres of land.

From a map found in the garret of the van Liew Homestead that stood opposite the present-day Three Mile Run Cemetery, Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen owned "Lot No. 3" The Homestead, however, still owned in 1931 by one of his descendants - Mrs. J. S. Clark - was on Lot #1. Apparently, between 1701 and 1715, a portion of "Lot #1" was either purchased of, or exchanged with, Denyse Theunissen, father of Helena Denyse, wife of Frederick (2F1), for the later Drew and present Kline farm, also all the land on the south side of the Amwell Road between Middlebush and Millstone we know to have been Van Liew lands, and by measurements today, from the known, present-day existant center division fence of Lot #7 we have found to check with the Map and that these known Van Liew lands were a part of Lot #3- on both sides of the "Middle Road" and as well from Middlebush to Millstone.

Frederick's (of 1670) Will specifically mentions land in ye Jerseys belonging to him, as having been already given by Deed of Sale to his youngest son Frederick (2F1) in connection with the provisions in the Will for the support of Frederick (2F1) until he was old enough to work this land in the Jerseys. We now know for a certainty that the land in question was Lot #3 of the Harrison Tract and that it contained 1200/1300 acres.

It is natural to suppose that the other two sons of Frederick of 1670 received as much from their father, in one form or another, as did Frederick (2F1). The Will refers to property already given to Johannes (2J1) and Hendrick (2H1) by "Deed of Sale". Just what the two older sons received is not stated in the Will.

From all the data found in 1931 and 1932, there is now no doubt but that Frederick of 1670, nine years after his purchase in 1701 of a portion of the Harrison Tract, bought, in 1710, another 500/600 acre tract in the Harlingen Tract, that Frederick of 1670 is the "Franz" or "Francis van Lewen of Queens" as his name is in error given by Snell and Corwin, and that between 1710 and when the Will was drawn in 1712, Frederick of 1670 had given this land of the Harlingen Tract, by Deed of Sale to Johannes (2J1) and that later Johannes' (2J1) son Frederick came over to New Jersey with his wife Mary Betts and that their descendants are the van L-I-E-U family of today.

(see Franz van Lewen - page 27)
(see under Johannes (2J1) - pages 54-55)

Such briefly, was the chain of events that caused the van Leeuwen family to flee from a part of the Netherlands, then comprising 17 provinces, and after 100 years residence in the provinces of Holland and Utrecht, caused one of the family, Frederick, a son of Hendrick of Utrecht, to come to this country in 1670, and thirty to forty years after his arrival here, to buy some 1800 to 2000 acres of land in the Harrison and Harlingen Tracts in New Jersey, which before his death he Deeded to two of his three sons, their descendants finally adopting the names van Lew and Van Lieu in the case of Johannes' (2J1) descendants, and Van Liew in the case of the descendants of Hendrick (2H1) and Frederick (2F1)., as well as Johannes (2J1)

In "Jamaica (L.I.) Town Records 1656-1751" Volume 2, page 17, is recorded a Deed dated October 5, 1699 covering the sale of a plot of ground by John Frederiksone (van Leeuwen) and his wife Allkea of Brookland (Brooklyn) and Fredericke Hendriksone (van Leeuwen) and his wife Dynah of Jamaica (joint owners) to one John Wollsey of Jamaica. This further confirms the close relationship between the families and suggests that "sisters" Aaltje and Dynah Janse had jointly inherited the property. Further, on page 178 is recorded a Deed covering the sale of property in "East Neck" Jamaica by Jan F. and Frederick H. van Leeuwen (co-owners) to Samuel Bayles. This Deed is likewise dated October 5, 1699. There is, however, no mention of the wives. (E. R. van L. 1955)

In the name of God, Amen. November 19, 1712

I, FREDERICK HENDRICKSON VAN LEAU, of Jamaica in Queens County, Gentleman, being weak in body, I leave the use of all my Estate, real and personal, to my wife, Dinah, which is not already given to my sons by Deed of Sale. Also 150, and she is to have an equal proportion with my daughters in all my estate, to be at her disposal, "but among my children", and she shall pay to my daughters, Greta, Dinah, Elizabeth and Analche, when they are married or of age, equal to what my daughter Mary Probasco, hath received. After my wife's decease, my house and lands and meadows and rights are to be sold at vendue among my children. If my wife should die before my youngest daughter is capable of earning her own living "something is to be allowed for her bringing up." If either of my sons, John, Henry, and Frederick, should die without issue the rest shall inherit his share. As I have given to my son, Frederick, by deed, land in the Jerseys I leave him 5 "and when he shall come of age to work upon his land in ye Jerseys, my son Henry is to allow him a year's board if he is single." My Estate in Holland, if ever it be obtained, is to be divided among my children.

- P 369-370. N. Y. Historical Society (Collns 1893) Abstract of Wills Vol 2, 1708-1728 Year.

"Gentleman"

In legal documents, including Wills that were written in the early days of this country, and at least up to the time of the Revolution, the reader will have observed that they were worded:- "John Doe, Smith," or "John Doe, Carpenter", or John Doe, Merchant", or "John Doe, Yeoman", or "John Doe, Gentleman", and you will have wondered why. The cause dates back to 1413.

The immediate cause was the statute I, of Henry V of England, Cap V, of 1413, which laid down that in all legal documents, the "estate degree or mystery" of the person must be stated as well as his present or former domicile.

Selden (Titles of Honor, 1672), discussing the title of "gentleman", speaks of "our English use of it", as "convertible with nobilis" and describes in connection with it the forms of ennobling in various European countries. William Harrison, writing a century earlier than Selden, says, "Gentlemen be those whom their race and blood, or at least their virtues, do make noble and known", but for the complete gentleman the possession of a coat of arms was in Harrison's time considered necessary.

By the 16th Century, the official view had become clearly established that "gentlemen" constituted a distinct order, and that the badge of this distinction was the heralds' recognition of the right to bear arms.

In this narrow sense, the word "Gentleman" has long since become obsolete. At the time Frederick Hendricksen Van Liew's Will was made, the 16th Century's acceptance was held.

When Frederick (of 1670) made his Will, the country was under English law. The Will to be legal had to conform to this Law.

The use of the word "Gentleman", therefore, in conforming to this ancient law of Henry V, as describing Frederick's "estate degree or mystery" indicates that he was of a "gentle" family of long descent, that he had a coat of arms, that he had the right to bear arms. If the above had not been so, his Will, as a legal document, would have been invalid.

OUR FIRST MATERNAL ANCESTOR

wife of

FREDERICK HENDRICKSEN VAN LEEUWEN OF 1670

Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen married Dinah Janse October 2, 1681.

It has been asserted by one authority that Dinah Janse was a daughter of Jan Janse. A search in Bergen's "Early Settlers of Kings County" shows there to have been a large number of settlers, in the early days, by the name of Janse or Jansen, both of which mean "the son of John".

Bergen necessarily had very incomplete records to go by in giving some of his earliest data. He states that it is supposed that Jan Jansen of Brooklyn, married Anneke Pieters (Praa) and the issue was:-

Jan Janse bap Mar 16, 1684

Niellje Janse bap Nov 17, 1685

Anneke Janse bap September 9, 1688 in Flatbush

Aaltje Janse bap Oct 30, 1692, in Brooklyn

Jan Jansen emigrated in 1651. He was on the assessment rolls of Brooklyn of 1675 and Bergen states "This may be the Jan who married Anneke Peters". It is seen from the above that Bergen did not have complete records and it is not sure that the above represents all the children of Jan Jansen. As it was customary in those days to have very large families, it seems unlikely the above four represent all the family of Jan Jansen.

The earliest baptismal records of New York and Brooklyn show that first Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen, before his marriage, was on several occasions, the witness at the baptisms of the children of Jan Fredericksen Van Leeuwen (Immigrant of 1652) and Aaltje Janse, and that after the marriage of Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen and Dinah Janse, the two families were generally, witnesses at the baptisms of each others children. It is then, highly probable that the two men were related, that the two girls were sisters. It is possible that cousins married sisters.

We see from Bergen, above, that Aaltje Janse, daughter of Jan Janse and Anneke Pieters (Praa) was baptised Oct 30, 1692.

The first child of Jan Fredericksen van Leeuwen (of 1652) named Jan, was baptised Dec 9, 1677, or 15 years before the Aaltje given by Bergen, was born, therefore, the two Aaltje Janse could not have been the same, as stated by Bergen in his "Early Settlers of Kings County".

Bergen, under "Jan Jansen" gives incomplete records of there having been three or four Jan Jansens as having come over between 1630 and 1650.

It was the custom in those days to more often than not, in the baptismal records, to omit the parents surname. Also in marriage records. Frequently the surname is omitted in the cases of both the van Leeuwen families above.

Bergen, under "Jan Jansen", also directs the reader to see the families, mentioning them, of some eighteen different names, among them the van Dyck, the van Pelt, the van der Bilt, the van Duyn, the van Brunt and other families being often called Jan Jansen- omitting their surnames.

In view of all the above then, it appears that Aaltje and Dinah Janse were sisters, that they were of one of these other families and not of the "Jan Jansen" mentioned by Bergen.

To find out their surnames, it would probably be necessary to get the earliest records of Jamaica (Dinah was living at Jamaica when she was married according to the marriage record) and find out what families were living in Jamaica in 1681, and from the genealogies of these families try to ascertain if any of them had daughters named Dinah or Dinah and Aaltje.

WILL OF DINAH

wife of Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen

Page 15.

In the name of God, Amen. I, Dinah Hendricksen van Leow, of Jamaica, in Queens County, widow of Frederick Hendricksen van Leow. I leave all my Estate to my children Johannes, Mary wife of Jacob Probasco of New York, Henry, Gertie wife of John Stryker of New York, Dinah wife of Volkert Dircksen, Fematie, Elizabeth wife of Evert van Wicklen, and Altie wife of John Dorland. And whereas by the Will of my husband, dated Nov. 19, 1712, my daughter Altie, wife of John Dorland may have some difficulty in having her share, as she has no children, my other children are to secure her one sixth of the Estate. My two old negroes are to choose which of my children they will live with. I make my son Hendrick and my sons-in-law John Dorland and John Stryker, Executors.

Dated June 4th, 1736; Proved Dec 30th, 1740

From Abs-tract of Wills N.Y. 1730-1744. Page 319.

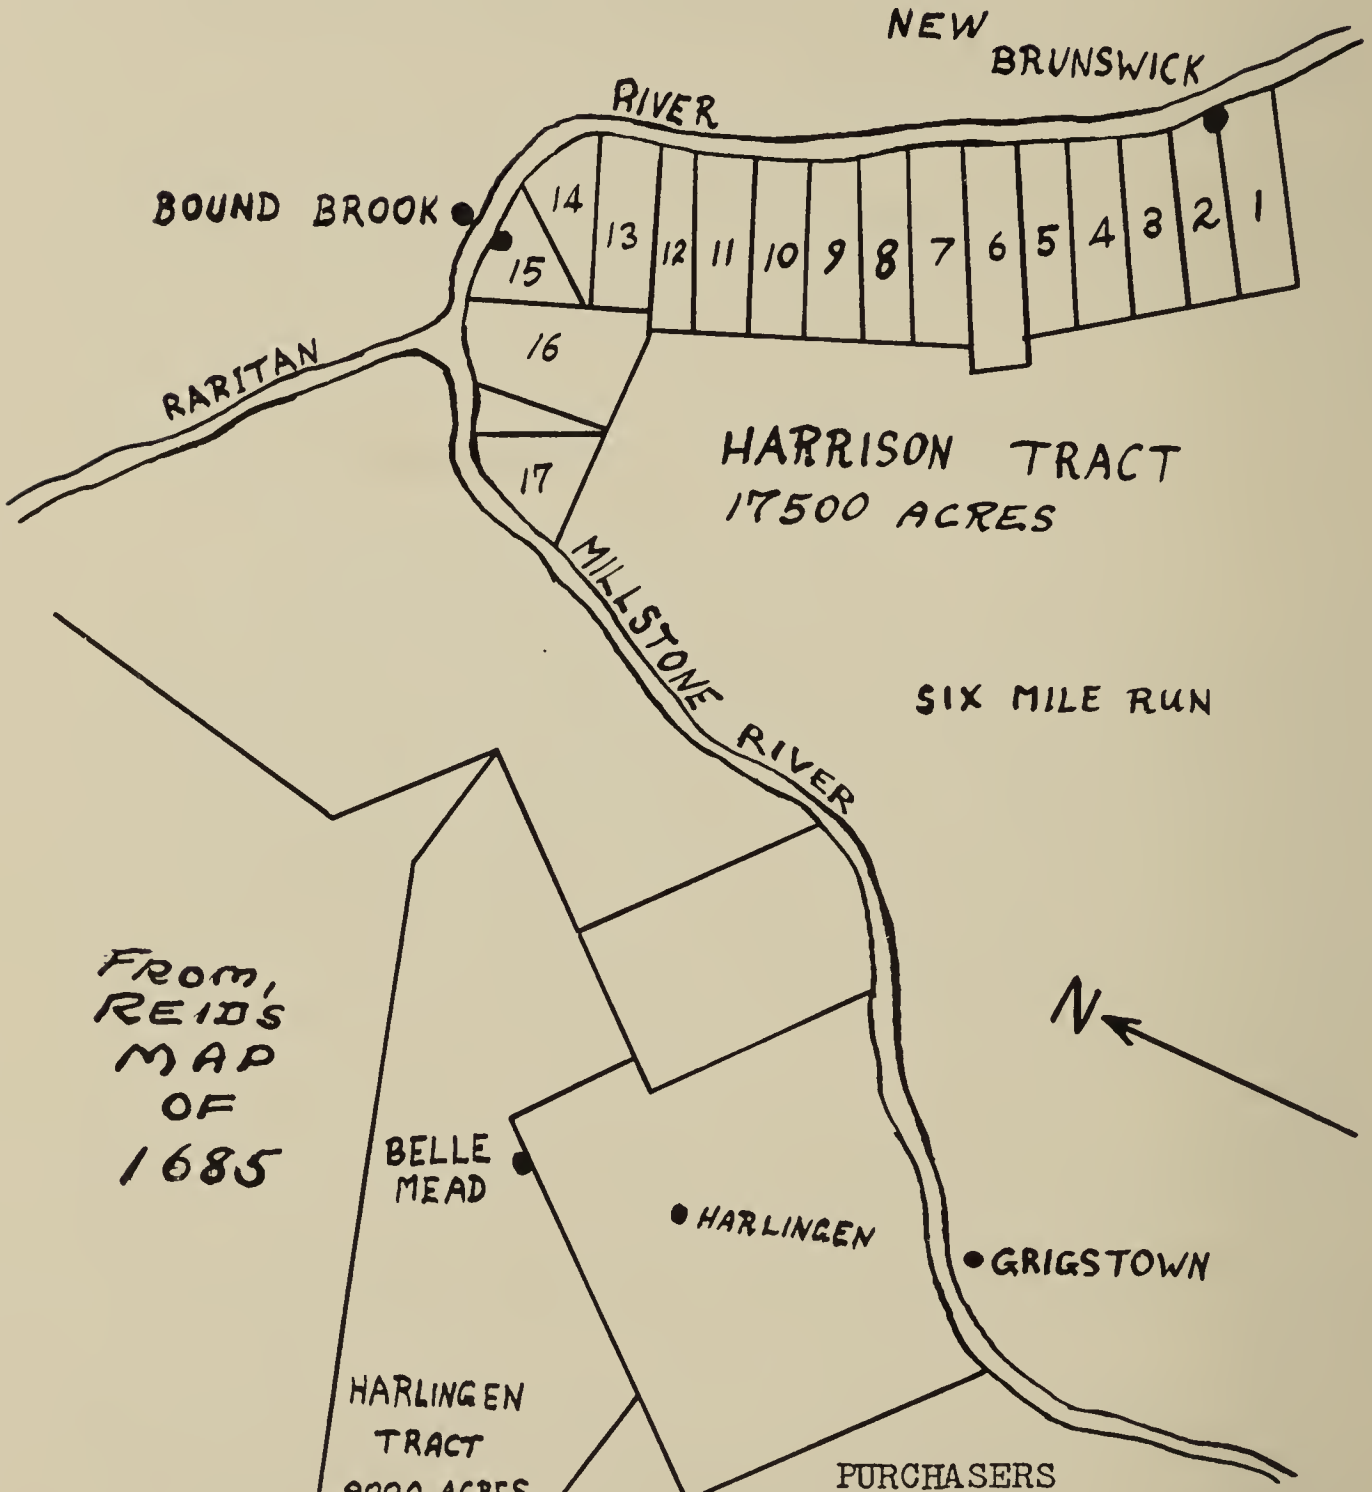

In N. Y. Public Library on 5th Ave., Room 328.

This WILL is interesting in that it indicates another daughter "Fematie" was born after Frederick's Will was made in 1712, and that Fematie was unmarried when her mother's Will was made.

It is also interesting in that no mention, although he was alive, was made of Frederick (2F1) the third son living at Three Mile Run, N. J. Frederick (2F1) had, according to Judge Ralph Voorhees, become the largest land and stock owner in Franklin Township, possibly because of this he was not included in the division of his mother's estate.

EXPLANATION MAP OF HARRISON TRACT

In locating the farms, villages and the original Van Liew Homestead on the map of the Harrison Tract, we have had two present-day landmarks, besides the different historical writings of Judge Ralph Voorhees (born 1796) contributed to the "New Brunswick Fredonian" in 1873, and later published in the different volumes of the Somerset County Historical Quarterly, under "Franklin Township Historical Notes."

We know from Mr. Jacob Wyckoff, who until recently, owned the farm of his forbear, Jacob Wyckoff (one of the four sons of Cornelius who purchased Lot #5) which lay on the south of South Middlebush Cemetery, that this Cemetery lay equally on the division line that divided Lot #5 in two equal parts between the Middle Road and the Millstone River. The center of the Cemetery is on the center division line of that part of Lot #5. Measuring from this point to the far side of the Middlebush Church it is 1.2 miles by speedometer. This checks with the chains given on the map. It also checks with Judge Voorhees who said that the Van Liews owned all the land on the south side of the Amwell road. This places the Van Liew lands on Lot #3 - Frederick's (3H4) and Cornelius' (3F7) - son of Frederick (2F1).

We know that the present Kline, former Drew farm, was Denice's (3F6), another son of Frederick (2F1), and that it was on lot #3.

All this agrees with the old map, but the location of the Van Liew Homestead is not on Lot #3, which one would suppose would have been the case.

From an old Deed of 1728, in the possession of Mr. Irving Hoagland, an attorney of New Brunswick, whose ancestral place is on Lot #7, we know that the fence running in front of Mr. Hoagland's home and over to the Lincoln Highway where it runs between the lawn of a Mr. Higgins and the field of Matilda Voorhees, is the center division line of Lot #7. (It is so stated in the Deed of 1728.) From this line, or fence, on the Lincoln Highway down to the Franklin Park Church, it measures by speedometer, eight tenths of a mile. Measuring from this fence, the center of Lot #7, down to the S.E. corner of Mrs. Clark's farm, it measures 2.85 miles, or 228 chains. By the map, it adds to 227½ chains - virtually an absolute check, but this makes the S.E. corner of Mrs. Clark's farm the S.E. corner of Lot #1, and from this S.E. corner of the farm to the R.R. tracks, it measures about four tenths of a mile and from the R.R. tracks to the road, on the left, that runs over to the Amwell Road, which road is supposed to be at the rear of the "Raritan Lots", it measures another four tenths of a mile.

This makes the Clark place which we know was occupied by Johannes and Dorothy Lott, to have been the Homestead, and on Lot #1.

Judge Voorhees says in his writings that Frederick (2F1) lived on Lot #1. Johannes we know succeeded him on the Homestead, then his daughter Ann, whose daughter Ida next inherited the place.

Ida, marrying Abraham J. Voorhees and they having no children, willed the place to Abraham's nephew and namesake, Abraham Voorhees, the father of Sarah Bronson Voorhees (Mrs. John S. Clark), herself a descendant of Frederick Van Liew (4F24). The place has thus been in the hands of descendants of Frederick of 1670 since 1701, and there can be no mistake about the Homestead's location, - as on Lot #1.

Apparently, and evidently, Frederick H. of 1670, owned Lot #3 as indicated on the old map that belonged to him, and as evidenced by Frederick (2F1) having settled his sons Denice and Cornelius on Lot #3, while his nephew Frederick (3H4) owned that part of #3 about Middlebush.

The Will of Johannes (3F8) states (Book 33, page 437, at Trenton) that he gave his daughter Antje (Ann), 180 acres, to be taken from the Homestead Farm, beginning in the middle of his farm along the Post Road and running N. E. along said Post Road toward Brunswick and to the rear of the Raritan Lots. Now "The Middle of his farm", as evidenced by the later and present Voorhees holdings, started at the present S. E. corner of Mrs. Clark's farm, or started at the S. E. corner of Lot #1, therefore, Johannes owned as much more in the other direction, along the Post Road, which must have taken in all that part of Lot #2 on the Post Road and part, probably all, of Lot #3 along the Post Road, therefore, the Homestead Farm must have run, starting from the rear of the Raritan Lots, for almost two miles down the Post Road, and probably to the S. E. corner of Lot #3, with the Homestead house and buildings on Lot #1, where the later-built, more modern buildings, are now standing on Lot #1, almost opposite the Three Mile Run Cemetery.

We conclude, therefore, that while the original purchase of Frederick of 1670, was Lot #3, as indicated on the old map of 1703 owned by Frederick of 1670, sometime later, probably before Frederick (2F1) went over to the wilderness of New Jersey to take possession of these lands deeded him by his father, as referred to in his father's will, either Frederick of 1670, or Frederick (2F1) must have purchased additional land fronting the Indian Path and that Frederick (2F1) must have located the house and buildings, not on Lot #3, but further toward New Brunswick, and on Lot #1.

It is also possible that before 1715, when Frederick (2F1) and Helena Denyse went over to N. J., the father of Helena Denyse who owned Lot #1 at the time of the purchase, may have sold, or the father may have willed, part of Lot #1, on the Post Road, to his daughter Helena, wife of Frederick (2F1).

Jacob Probasco, who owned Lot #2, was a brotherinlaw of Frederick (2F1), and an exchange or purchase may have been arranged between them.

The above is the only explanation that appeals to the writer, as to why the map shows Frederick of 1670 to have owned Lot #3, while the Homestead of his son, Frederick (2F1) was on Lot #1.

DEED OF THE HARRISON TRACT

Mr. Irving Hoagland of Franklin Park has had a photostat made of (a) 3 pages, 339, 340 and 341 of the State Office Book, "G" of Deeds at Trenton, in which the original deed is copied, and (b) pages 189 and 190, a supplementary indenture, correcting a mistake made in the first indenture in naming a certain brook in the boundaries given.

These 5 photostats are the property of Mr. Hoagland whose intention is that someday they will become the property of Rutgers University's library.

The writing, the legal phraseology, the different spelling of words then, the abbreviations of words and legal terms, the use of the old letter "s", and a totally different letter "e" used then, all make the reading of these deeds almost like reading another language. Some words and parts I am unable to decipher altogether. (W.R.vL 1931)

Aunt Betsy (5F35) Van Liew

"FRANZ Lewen" or "FRANCIS" Van Lewen

In front of Corwin's Historical Discourse of 1866 (N. J. Hist. Soc.), there is shown a map compiled from Reid's Map of 1685, and other maps, that gives the names of the purchasers, and the locations of their tracts, of the 17 purchasers of what is known as "The Harlingen Tract", sold in 1710.

The map shows the second from the lowest plot, to the east, its eastern boundary about $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles due west of the present location of the Harlingen Church, and its south western corner some two miles from Skillman, as belonging to Franz Lewen. In the text, Ibid, page 21, the name is written Francis van Lewen. The text page 25 gives the names of all these 17 purchasers, and groups so many as from New York, so many from Kings, and three of them, among them Francis Van Lewen, as "from Queens". This same data is given in Snell's History of Somerset and Hunterdon Counties of N. J. (page 776 of text and pages 775-776 for maps). Search of the old baptismal and other records of the churches of New York, Brooklyn, Jamaica and Flatbush, of the earliest days, shows no records, at any time, of a Franz or Francis Lewen or van Lewen. Franz is a German name, Francis is an English name, neither likely to have been given to a Dutch baby of that period.

In view of the fact that Snell gives the names of the 9 purchasers of the "Harrison Tract", correctly as to eight, but the ninth as Hendrick Hendricks instead of Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen, and others beside Snell make the same mistake, it is obvious that the name of Franz or Francis is incorrectly given.

There was only one Van Lewen or Van Leeuwen at that period "of Queens" and he was Frederick of 1670. (Jamaica was in Queens)

The present-day tradition (see under Johannes (2J1) of the van L-I-E-U family that "with other Dutch families their family came over from the vicinity of New York and settled near Skillman", combined with the statement in the text that the van Lewen who purchased part of the Harlingen Tract was "of Queens" makes it certain that "Franz" or "Francis" van Lewen was none other than Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen of 1670, who bought this land in 1710, and Deeded it to his eldest son Johannes (2J1) when his Will was made in 1712, and whose grandson Frederick, (son of Johannes (2J1) with his wife Mary Betts, came over and settled on it after 1740 and were the forbears of the family that now spell their name Van L-i-e-u in New Jersey and Van Lew elsewhere.

DAUGHTERS OF FREDERICK OF 1670

GRETA VAN LIEW married Jan or John Stryker on October 30, 1713.

John Stryker's father was Garret Stryker of Long Island. In 1712, Jan Stryker purchased of Peter Cortelyou of New Utrecht, L. I., 300 acres of ground that ran from the Indian path to the "Middle Road" of what may be seen on the Map as on Plot 7 of the Map of the Harrison Plot Purchase of 1701. This land--the 300 acres--lay on the North side of the center dividing line fence of Lot 7. The Hagamans owned, later, the land on the other side of the center dividing line fence of 7. This dividing line between Lots 7 and 8, in its entire length, is in 1931 established by the Peter Cortelyou survey in 1703, and in 1931 has on one side of the line, at Franklin Park, the house and lawn of a Mr. Higgins, and on the other side of the line a field belonging at present to Matilda G. Voorhees. Jan paid Cortelyou 300 pounds English money for the 300 acres in 1712. In 1713, Jan married Greta Van Liew and presumably they lived there from 1713. From these two descend most of the Strykers in New Jersey there having been many men of prominence among their descendants.

MARY VAN LIEW married Jacob Probasco of New Jersey. She was already married when her father's will was drawn in 1712. Jacob Probasco was a son of Stoeffel Probasco who in turn was a son of Jurian Probasco the Immigrant of 1654. Now Stoeffel Probasco was, with Frederick Van Liew of 1670, one of the purchasers of the 10,000 acre "Harrison Plot" comprising most of the present Franklin Township, Stoeffel Probasco's "Lot" of 1200-1300 acres lying adjacent to the land of Frederick of 1670 at Three Mile Run. Stoeffel's son Jacob and Mary Van Liew lived at Three Mile Run on part of this original purchase of their father's, Stoeffel's.

ELIZABETH VAN LIEW married Evert Janse Van Wichelen, who emigrated from Wykel or Wykelen in 1664, settled at New Lots and married Elizabeth subsequent to 1712. They became the ancestors in this country of the present Van Winckle family.

ANALCHE or ANOLETE ALETIE, VAN LIEW married John Doelant.

DINAH VAN LIEW married Folkert Dierichson, or Dirchson (in English, Richardson)

FEMATIE VAN LIEW unmarried - see Dinah's will.

* * * * *

From the above, it will be seen that when Frederick Van Liew age 23 and Helena Denyse age 17, were married and went to New Jersey to live about 1717, Frederick had two sisters already living there, Greta Stryker at Franklin Park and Mary Probasco a next door neighbor, while Helena Denyse's father owned Lot #1, and her Uncles Peter and Jaques Cortelyou were both owners of large tracts at Franklin Park - see map, page

HIS DESCENDANTS

(Special note:- Beyond finding the children of Johannes (2J1), those of Frederick (3J4), and the descendants of Richard (4J13) - the AUTHOR had established little of a definite nature to connect the Descendants of this Branch to their Ancestor.

The original manuscript contains some interesting conjecture on how the descendants of this branch connect with the definite facts in the Author's possession, such as Elizabeth L. Van Lew of Richmond fame. After the manuscript was completed, he "discovered" Frederick F. Van Lew (4J18) but did not persue that line any further. He was also exposed to the situation described elsewhere under the title 'The Story of a Letter'. The portion pertaining to the descent of Elizabeth L. Van Lew was never acceptable to him, but the peculiar wording of that Letter, led him to believe that her brother, John Newton Van Lew, died unmarried. See page 65.

Accordingly, the full development of this portion of the book is the work of the Co-Author, who accepts responsibility for its correctness. It is interesting to note, that with the exception of the marital status of the above-mentioned John Newton Van Lew all of the conjectures on the part of the AUTHOR proved to be correct.

BIBLIOGRAPHY AND SUPPORTING EVIDENCE AS PERTAINING TO DESCENDANTS OF JOHANNES VAN LIEW (2J1)

Item A:

Will of John van Lewa (2J1) of Flushing, Queens Co. N.Y. Dated 28th July 1767 -- Proved 29th Oct. 1767. (From abstracts of Wills vol 7 (1766-1771) N. Y. Hist Soc. (1898)

To grandson John Dorland (son of dau. Dina - £ 140/
To grandchildren - children of Mary Monfort £ 90/
To dau. Katharine van Pelt £ 140/
To children of dau. Sarah Rainsom £ 140/
To granddaughter Katharine van Lewa - dau. of son Henry £ 90/
To dau. Mary £ 50/ - "which I give in lieu of the £ 50/ my son Henry paid her husband Peter Monfort as part of her portion."
To grandson John, son of son Henry £ 400/
To grandson John, son of son Frederick, £ 5/-"as a bar or hindrance to his claims as heir at law."

To son John all lands in Flushing - he to pay all debts and legacies.

Signed John van Lewen

Note - Daughters Aeltje and Rebecka not mentioned. Were they alive at the time this will was signed? And what about the lands in the Harlingen Tract - N.J. ? He must have turned these over at a prior time, for it is known that Mary (VL) Monfort and son John had some of their children baptized at Harlingen.

Item B:

Will of Frederick Van Leaw (3J4)

Son of Johannes (2J1) and husband of Mary Betts.
(From abstracts of wills of N.Y. 1754-1760, vol 5, pages 58-59.)

In the name of God, Amen. I, Frederick van Leaw, in Jamaica Queens Co., Yeoman, being now sick. My Executors to pay all my lawful debts and funeral charges, and to sell movable Estate for that purpose. I leave my wife Mary my silver tankard and five large silver spoons, and my best bed and furniture and the use of my dwelling house and lands, and the rest of my movable Estate so long as she continues my widow, for the support and maintenance of my children. If my wife marries, then my dwelling house and lands to be sold by my executors, and they are to pay to my daughters Catherine, Aletta and Elizabeth, sixty English pounds each, and to my youngest son Frederick sixty pounds, and all the rest to my sons John, Richard and Frederick, and forasmuch as my father-in-law, Mr. Richard Betts, by his will left to my daughters Sarah and Mary, each ninety pounds, therefore, I have not named or given them anything. I make my wife Mary, and my brother Henry van Leaw, and my son John (when of age) Executors.

Dated Feb. 11th, 1755; Proved April 5th, 1755.

In the 15 volumes containing these Abstracts of old Wills is also found the Will of Richard Betts, wherein he leaves, among other things, a certain acreage (15.5 as is remembered) - also a certain sum, to be used to build a house thereon, for his only daughter Mary, wife of Frederick van Leaw, - also, a slave to his granddaughter Sarah van Leaw.

Deductions (item B)

1. We know that the other two grandsons of Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen of 1670 named "Frederick" were living in New Jersey. One was married to Maria van der Bilt, and the other died single. Thus the only Frederick van Leeuwe who could have married Mary Betts was Frederick (3J4). Furthermore, in the cases of his children, Sarah and Dirk (Richard), both baptised in Jamaica, the names of the witnesses and the name of the mother - "Marytie", further confirm that it was the son of Johannes (2J1) who married Mary Betts. The name Dirk, the Dutch for Richard, is the first time it appears in the family, but henceforth is encountered among the descendants of this Richard quite frequently. It was of course in honor of Mary's father, grandfather, and great grandfather--all named Richard.
2. Frederick (3J4) was just forty years old when he signed the above Will, and he was sick. His naming his son John as one of the executors "when of age" is significant in that it identifies this John with the one whose Will is abstracted under ITEM F, and who died in 1812, at the age of 77 years, 4 months and 15 days, - and therefore born in 1735. This makes Frederick's (3J4) son John twenty years of age at the time he was named Executor - "when of age".
3. Frederick (3J4) makes special provision for "my youngest son Frederick". I am therefore convinced that this is none other than Frederick F. - husband of Penelope Stout, who, according to tradition, assumed the "F" in order to set himself apart from all the other Fredericks in the family. Frederick F. was born on Feb. 5th, 1755 - just six days before his father signed his Will. How did he happen to get to New Jersey, and serve in the Revolutionary War as a member of the Middlesex Co. Militia (in which he was a 3rd Lt.)--? I think it is reasonable to accept that his older brother Richard, nineteen years his senior, and who we know moved to the vicinity of Hopewell, N. J. - and was likewise in the R.W.- had taken his younger brother to live with him. Mary (Betts) van Leaw was left a very young widow with many mouths to feed!

Item C:

Johannes (3J6) b-1719 is evidently one who benefited by his grandfather's purchase of the 500/600 acres in the Harlingen Tract, for it is he who married Maregrita (Grietje) Monfoort, cousin of Peter Monfort, who in turn married John's (3J6) sister Mary (3J10). Some of John's children are recorded in the baptismal records of Harlingen, but it is the Will of his sister-in-law Antie Monfoort of Hempsted, Queens Co., that enumerates the others.

In this Will, Antie Monfoort mentions the children of Margaret Van Lew, - John, Catrina, Susanne, Antie and Margaret - as well as a Nelly Hegeman. It continues - "To my niece Antie Van Lew, £ 6/. All the rest of my Estate I leave to my brother Peter Monfoort, Nelly Hegeman, the children of my sister Margaret Van Lew - etc."

(From Abstracts of Will 1766-1771.)

Item D:

Little is known of Hendrick Van Leaw (3J7) other than the following facts:

1. He is mentioned in his father's Will by virtue of the legacies left to his children Katharine and John.
2. He is the brother Henry appointed as one of the executors of the Estate of Frederick (3J4). See Item B.

Item E:

Will of Henry Van Lew of the Town of Jamaica, Queens Co. Dated 8th August 1817 -- Probated 7th Dec. 1818. (LDP 177, Queens Co. Surrogates Court).

To sister Ida - wife of David Sprong -- $100.00

To niece Ellen - wife of Benjamin Doughty -- $100.00

To brother Frederick Van Lew - use and income of the residue of Estate to be applied by him for the support and education of his children, and after Frederick's death the residue be equally divided among all his children.

We cannot correctly place this Henry Van Lew and the beneficiaries of his above Will.

Item F:

Will of John Van Lew (4J11) of Jamaica, Queens Co. Dated 25th May 1812 - Probated 15th July 1812. (Queens Co. Surrogates Court LCP 221)

To wife Martha Van Lew - personal belongings and $1,000.00

To son James - $25.00

To son John - 25.00

To son Henry - 1,000.00

To son William 350.00

To daughter Ann - wife of William Puntine - $500.00

To son Richard - $125.00

To daughter Mary - wife of Eliphalet Wheeler - $375.00

We learn from "Queens County in Olden Times" by Henry Onderdonck (1865) that in Sept. 1777, a John Van Lew, Sr. and a John Van Lew, Jr. both contributed toward a fund of 219 pounds Sterling to the encouragement of a new corps (Fanning's) at the request of Governor Tyron, (N.Y. Mercury). We also find that in May 1792, a John Van Lew of Jamaica contributed toward the building of a new Academy. We also find a John Van Lew among the names of pew holders and contributors towards Grace Church of Jamaica (1803-1809).

Also, in a book of funerals recorded at Grace Protestant Episcopal Church of Jamaica (1790-1830), we find the following:-

Funeral of Richard Van Lew of this Parish, June 6th, 1812

Will of Henry Van Lew of Hempstead, Queens Co., dated 25th Feb. 1830 -
Proved 8th July 1830. (LGP 20 Queens Co. Surrogates Court).

To Nephew Caleb Van Lew - $250.00.

The residue to brother John Van Lew and sisters Patty Price and Polly Wheeler. This last beneficiary establishes Henry as (5J28) son of John (4J11) - whose Will (Item F.) mentions daughter Mary as wife of E. Wheeler. Mary VL and "Polly" VL Wheeler are one and the same person. It has not been possible to determine just where nephew Caleb fits into the scheme of things. Caleb's Will is also recorded in Jamaica - date Sept. 15, 1879 L27P27.

Item H:

Re:- Richard Van Lieu.

Early in 1931, the author learned of a family of van Lieus living in Ringoes, N. J. Communicating with Miss Rachel Van Lieu (9J168) she learned that the 1st date of the family they had was the birth date of her great grandfather Richard Van Lieu, born Feb. 18, 1815, and that they knew Richard's father was named Frederick.

Rachel Van Lieu advised getting in touch with Mrs. Harold Houghton (nee See Mae Van Lieu) who had done considerable work on the family record, and who confirmed the above, further stating that Frederick had a brother Charles and a sister Charity who married a William Craft. At that time investigations by Mrs. Houghton at Hopewell and at Van Lieu's Corners at Zion, near Hopewell, - and by the author at the old Harlingen Cemetery and Church Records, yielded nothing conclusive toward finding a connecting link to tie the "Van Lieus" to anyone further back than about 1800. } See
Item
p. 78

In 1932, the mother of Rachel Van Lieu sent the author a copy of some data taken from the fly leaf of an old book having come to them through the son of the above Charity Van Lieu Craft. The data pertained to the family of a Richard Van Lue, gives dates of Richard's birth, of his wife's, also her name and the dates of birth of their children, and is headed by the following statement:

"RICHARD VAN LUE SON OF FREDERICK AND MARY VAN LUE"

This statement, in connection with the baptismal records of the Jamaica L.I. Church, and in connection with the Betts Genealogy by Ryker, was the first key that enabled the author to place the Van Lieus, and likewise to "place" the "Franz" or "Francis" Van Lewen of Queens, who was one of the 17 purchasers of the Harlingen Tract of 9000 acres sold in 1710. See page 27 .

The "Frederick and Mary Van Lue" who were the father and mother of "Richard Van Lue" were none other than "Frederick and Marytie van Leeuwe" of the Jamaica baptismal records, and the "Dirck" as the name was recorded by the Dutch Dominie, is the anglicised "Richard" of the fly leaf of this book, (the name Richard having come from the Betts family, each generation having had a "Richard Betts").

This Richard Van Lue as written on the fly leaf is the Richard Van Lew who is listed by Stryker in his "Jerseymen in the American Revolution".

There is a discrepancy of three years?? The date of Richard's birth on the fly leaf is 1743. The date of the baptism of "Dirck" was 1740. Had the date 1743 been in the old Dutch family Bible, entered when he was born, a discrepancy of this sort would have to be seriously considered. As the date on the fly leaf (1743) was evidently entered years later by some one who knew the approximate birth date, the discrepancy becomes secondary. It could also have happened that the Dirck (Richard) of 1740 died, and the next son was also named Dirck (Richard). The author is inclined to favor the theory that the 1743 date was an error. The IMPORTANT clue is the statement that Richard was the son of "Frederick and Mary Van Lue" - which ties him up to Mary Betts, and thus to Johannes (2J1) and thus to Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen of 1670.

Although, as mentioned on page 27, the author at one time believed that Frederick (3J4) and his wife Mary Betts, actually settled on this land of the Harlingen Tract, it is the co-author's opinion that it was his son Richard who did so, served in the Revolutionary War as part of the N. J. Militia, and was the ancestor of the Van L I E U s, who seem to have adopted the spelling about 1800 A.D.

Issue of Feb. 7, 1900

The Stout Family of New Jersey and New York descended from English and Dutch ancestry in a romantic manner.

Richard Stout, the original progenitor of the family in America, was born about 1610 in Nottinghamshire, England. Being thwarted during early life by his father, a nobleman of England, in a love affair with a young girl beneath him in social life, he enlisted on a British man-of-war. He served his full time, and was honorably discharged at Manhattan Island, while under the government of the Dutch.

About the same year, 1640, a vessel from Holland, with passengers was wrecked on the coast of Jersey, near Sandy Hook and nearly all on board were lost. Among the few rescued was a young woman whose husband upon swimming ashore, was killed by the Indians, while she was saved in a wounded and forsaken condition. Cared for by the natives, she was entirely restored and carried by them in a boat to the Island of Manhattan. This person's name was Penelope Van Princes (Prinsis), now a young Dutch widow.

She shortly afterward made the acquaintance of Richard Stout, at that time a resident and land-owner at Gravesend, L. I. About 1643-4, they were married and, according to tradition, they with others, soon moved to the very shores of Monmouth Co., N. J. where the shipwreck occurred a few years before.

On account of the unfriendliness of the Indians, the settlement was broken up. The five or six Dutch families, with Richard Stout, returned to Manhattan, the latter to Gravesend where he lived a few years with Lady Moody's Colony, being one of the thirty-nine patentees.

Some of the near descendants of this Richard Stout moved from New Jersey to what is now Lodi, and their descendants are still with us, all of whom have been respected and prosperous people, and for the interest the readers of the Independent will take in it, this correspondent proposes to trace this large and influential family down to the present day and give a few interesting facts connected therewith.

Penelope Stout, named for Penelope Van Princes (who was in the shipwreck before mentioned) was the daughter of Richard Stout, son of John, son of Joseph, son of Jonothan, son of the original Richard Stout. This Penelope Stout married in East Jersey a young man by the name of Frederick F. Van Liew, whose parents also emigrated from Holland and settled in New Jersey. (Error.)

This Frederick F. Van Liew was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. He and his wife Penelope moved to this section (Lodi) from New Jersey in 1799 and settled on the farm now owned and occupied by Daniel G. Covert, something less than a mile south of Lodi Lehigh Valley Station, the house on the farm being then near the Halsey place.

Frederick's wife was very homesick and longed to go back to New Jersey, as there had as yet been found no soft water springs (as in New Jersey). She said that she could not wash her dishes or clothes knowing nothing of, or never having had occasion to use rain water up to this time. All preparations had been made for the return, and the team was harnessed, when by chance they discovered on the place, a spring, which was, singular to say, softer and sweeter than any in New Jersey. Here let us say that there is probably not a spring in this whole section like this one, soft as rain water and contains more medicinal properties than most of the advertised medicinal springs.

Right beside this spring, Frederick and Penelope settled, lived and died. The same property is now owned by descendants of the same family, viz: Daniel G. Covert, who received it from Alzina Covert, a daughter of Anna Gibson, who was a daughter of Frederick and Penelope Van Liew. Nathan S., their son, came into possession of the farm and at his death, Daniel R. Gibson and his wife, Anna. Frederick F. Van Liew and his wife, Penelope, erected the brick house which is now standing, just as it was nearly a century ago, and is in first class condition today. At that time it was a great curiosity, as it was the first of its kind in this country. The brick for it was made in the barnyard now owned by Mrs. Luther Knight, daughter of the late Thomas B. Neal, a grand-daughter of Richard, son of Frederick Van Liew. The woodwork in this historic house was done by a man named McConnel for the sum of $50. An inspection of this work would show that even in that early day, fine workmen could be found. The mason work was done by Daniel Stout, nephew of Penelope, and Isaac Brown, father of Elmira, wife of the late Elial S. Miller who removed from Lodi to Peabody, Kas. in 1884.

To Frederick and Penelope were born eleven children, viz: 1790, Elizabeth; 1791, John; 1794, Nathaniel S.; 1795, William; 1797, Mary; 1799, Frederick; 1801, Richard; 1803, Peter; 1804, Anna; 1807, Elhanan; 1810, Penelope. Elizabeth died early. Nathaniel S. Died in 1856. He was the father of two sons who became well-known in all this section--Myron and Frederick, and grandfather of Charles I. Van Liew, of Albany who is known all over the state. His father was Myron, and Frederick was the father of Mrs. Alison B. Covert, now of Williamson, Wayne Co. Mary, wife of Samuel Benson died in 1859; John died in 1839; William died in 1881; Richard died in 1881; Elhanan in 1864; Peter in 1882; Anna in 1888; Penelope, wife of Amos Peterson, died in 1897. The children of Frederick and Penelope Van Liew best known to the people of Lodi and Seneca County, were; Richard, Anna, Elhanan and Penelope, they having settled and resided here all their lives.

Richard was a very active man, a great church worker, and contributor, a communicant of the Methodist church in Lodi and devoted most of his time during his latter years to the work of the church. He was, in fact, its foremost financier. He married Maria Hoagland, to whom were born two children, Wilhelmina Neal, recently diseased, and Mary Ingersoll, of Ithaca, also recently diseased.

Anna married Daniel R. Gibson, a man very highly and universally respected. They had a large family of children. A grandson, D. G. Covert, before mentioned, is now upon the homestead.

Penelope, the youngest, named also for the original Penelope Van Princes, married Amos Peterson, one of the most highly respected and substantial men in the county. Mr. Peterson is now nearly 91 years of age, in many ways a wonderful old man, as active mentally and physically as most men at 70. His children are Elhanan, who was sketched recently as a "Lodi Boy", Henry and Daniel. Henry is an expert in the rearing and judging of fine horses, has large farming interests, and is now the treasurer of the great Willard State Hospital. Elhanan has only one daughter, also named Penelope--so it seems the family is determined that the name of the noted woman, Penelope Van Princes, shall be continued.

This writer could also go on and relate many facts of interest concerning other members of this large and interesting family--about Elhanan who reared a large and intelligent family; who was the most noted lumberman that Seneca County has ever had; of Peter, who married Anna Couch, a daughter of Adam Couch, prominent in the early days, and what he accomplished in Michigan (see ensuing article on Peter Van Lew), of Mary, wife of Samuel Benson, and of his connection with the mills which formed the subject of an article in the Independent not long since by this writer--but must keep this within reasonable limits.

Richard Van Liew and Penelope Peterson used to tell the story, that the Indians, supposing they had killed Penelope Van Princes, as well as her husband, left her for dead and an old Indian Chief sewed up her wounds and nursed her to health and vigor and protected her as his adopted daughter. Her sufferings were so great she begged her rescuer to kill her, but the chief was determined to accomplish her restoration. She afterwards married the original Richard Stout in 1643, reared a large and influential family and died at the age of 112 years.

Frederick F. Van Liew and his wife Penelope are buried in West Lodi Cemetery. Their graves are marked by those old, noted grey stones, which are said by experts to be the finest thing in our cemetery, the carving done on them nearly a century ago, looking nearly as if done only yesterday. The limit of this brief history of this branch of a large and interesting family is reached. Their influence upon South Seneca for a century cannot be calculated and all from the narrow escape from the shipwreck in 1640 of Penelope Van Princes.

Item J:

The following are found among the typed, bound copies of the records of births and baptisms of the Presbyterian Church of Jamaica Long Island:-

James Van Lew and Elizabeth Rider, his wife married 1790.

Issue -

Mary b, 1791; Elizabeth b, 1792; Martha b, 1794; John b, 1796; Catherine b, 1797; Sarah Smith b, 1799; Ann b, 1801; Rebecca b, 1805.

If the above James Van Lew was 25 years of age when his first child was born, he himself was born in 1766-1767, which would make him two or three years older than John Jr. It is interesting to note that James is the first of the children to be mentioned in his father's Will (Item F).

Item K:

Will of John Van Lew (5J27) of the Township of Jamaica, Queens Co. Dated 18th Sept. 1828 -- Proved 4th January 1834. LQP 342 Queens Co. Surrogates Court.

(This Will is of extreme importance, especially in the light of "The Story of a Letter" on page 65).

"I do give my beloved wife Sarah the use of all my estate, Real and Personal so long as she remains my widow for a maintenance for herself and the YOUNGER children -"

This is followed by various provisions to take care of situations arising from the decease and/or marriage of Sarah prior to the younger children becoming of age, and then:-

"And further it is my wish that when my said wife shall decease and the ABOVE NAMED children shall be of age, then and NOT BEFORE, my executors to sell all my estate, both real and personal, and divide the moneys equally between all my children, share and share alike."

Although neither the younger nor the older children are mentioned by name, this Will is very significant.

Sarah, who was none other than Sarah Stout, younger sister of Penelope Stout (wife of Frederick F.-4J18 - Van Lew) was young enough to remarry (which she did not do). She was, therefore, the second wife and mother of the YOUNGER children.

The older children, who were to share in the Estate only after Sarah's death, and only after the younger children became of age, were, in 1828, not in need of support.

Furthermore, we know that John Van Lew (6J62) wrote a letter to his mother and sister on August 23, 1813. This letter - see Item L. was addressed to Mrs. Elizabeth Van Lew, Jamaica, Long Island, is presently in the possession of Daisy Van Lew Omohundro, grand daughter of John (6J62).

We also know that tradition states that John (6J62) was the issue of a marriage of John (5J27) and an Elizabeth Van Lew, cousins. We are far from positive on this point, as the above mentioned "Story of a Letter" will indicate.

On the other hand we know that prior to 1818 (the date of the death of the Mrs. Van Lew -- Item F --) John Van Lew (6J62) had established himself as an eminently successful merchant in Richmond, Virginia, having moved to that city in approximately 1808. He therefore would have logically been excluded from his father's Will as an "older child - not requiring support".

Finally, John (5J27) was the ONLY John Van Lew of Jamaica, of the right age - (in view of the early marriages of that day) - to have been the father of John (6J62) - regardless of whether or not Elizabeth the first wife, and John's (6J62) mother was a Van Lew.

In the face of the aforementioned evidence and logical conclusions it is determined that John Van Lew (6J62), at one time perhaps the wealthiest man in Richmond, Virginia, is the son of John Van Lew (5J27).

What happened to John's (5J27) children, we do not know. Possibly some of the Van Lew girls, whose marriages are recorded on page 202, are his daughters.

Letter sent by John Van Lew (6J62) to

Mrs. Elizabeth Van Lew,
Jamaica, Long Island
State of New York

Richmond August 23, 1813

My Dear Mother & Sister:

I have again safely returned to Richmond from a long and pleasant journey, and am happy to inform you that my health is much benefited.

I have been the Lord only knows where. It is impossible for me to give you a description of my travels, for I actually could fill one quine of paper. I have traveled over an immense number of mountains, one of which was four miles high - when I was one and a half miles from the top, I peared through the clouds. We had to hire a guide to conduct us to the top, otherwise we never should have found the way for there is but one narrow path that leads to the top.

The mountains are inhabited by Bears, Panthers, Wolves, Deer and Rattlesnakes, - all in the greatest abundance. I have for curiosity brought home some rattles which I would like to send you.

The people live in log houses but appear to have plenty of everything. Now let me give you some description of the Springs.

(The ensuing two paragraphs describe the White Sulphur Springs)

Your next letter you will please direct to Lynchburg as I shall in the course of the next ten days be settled there, it is only 120 or 130 miles from here. I am sending up a large stock of goods, and am to take charge of the store there. Go where I may I shall never forget you.

As ever

ITEM M

THE STORY OF A LETTER

A HEADACHE - A MAN HUNT - AND THE SOLVING OF THE MYSTERY

W. Randolph van Liew, the author of this book had very scant information pertaining to the descendants of Johannes, the first son of Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen of 1670.

He knew of the existence of Elizabeth L. Van Lew - of Richmond fame (his uncle Cornelius having visited her prior to 1900) and included in his original manuscript her story as reported at the time of her death to the Boston Herald.

Subsequently, a cousin of the Hendrick branch sent him a chart credited to one Arthur Terwilliger and outlining the "exact" connection between the Richmond and the Jamaica, Long Island Van Lews.

This chart was not acceptable in itself to warrant inclusion in the manuscript. It was, however, sufficiently intriguing to warrant further investigation and thus became the subject of correspondence between the author and Don Carlos Van Liew. Catherine Van Liew Mattoon, the sister of DC Van L. passed the letter on to Daisy Van Lew Omohundro, and it then became the foundation for the Van Lew Excursus in the Omohundro Genealogical Record. As a matter of fact, the entire first portion of the Excursus is a verbatim copy of that letter written by WRvan L to DC Van L (pages 649-650 Omo G. Record) with the exception of the words "now Van Lew" in the first line, and the "175?" date after the name Frederick in the last line. There is one further omission, the ensuing Genealogical sequence is not credited to Arthur Terwilliger as it was in the original WRvanL letter.

When after my father's death I took upon myself the publication of the book, I learned that there were some very much alive Richmond Van Lews, and being unaware of the above chain of events, hoped that the Van Lew Excursus above mentioned would give me the solution to the problem. When I saw the Excursus I realized that if anything, I was more confused than ever, for I had discovered some Long Island Wills that further tended to contradict this information, but from other correspondents kept receiving charts that very closely followed the pattern of the one from Arthur Terwilliger. My conclusion was, therefore, that they all had a common source, and the problem was to find Arthur Terwilliger's sons.

Knowing A. T.'s descent from Frederick F. VL, I began making inquiries and eventually received the name and address of Robert Terwilliger of Hartford, Connecticut, who very graciously supplied me with the Genealogical notes accumulated by his father Arthur Terwilliger. They contained THE letter that was responsible for the confusion. Before returning it, I made a photostatic copy and am therefore able to reproduce it as follows:

The answer to the enigma became evident. R. W. Groom, himself a descendant of Frederick F. Van Lew used this letter from Mary Pauline Klapp to build up the following chart (without doing any research of his own, whatsoever) which he disseminated among the various members of the family. One copy came into the hands of WRvanL and was incorporated by him in a letter sent to DCVanL - as previously mentioned.

The inaccuracies of the above CHART are:-

1. Ann Klapp herself is not sure of the first name of the husband of the English woman named Betts". As it turns out, the name was Frederick Van Liew b, 1715. We have his will of 1755 in which he mentions "my father-in-law Mr. Richard Betts" and we have the will of Mr. Betts in which he mentions "my only daughter Mary, wife of Frederick van Leaw".
2. John (1A) was born in 1735. His son John (2A) was born in 1769 and to have been the ancestor of Mrs. Supplee he would have had to have been the father of Frederick F VL b-1755 (husband of Penelope Stout). This speaks for itself.
3. And who was Frederick (1B) on this chart? If we are to accept the English woman named Betts as his mother,- then he was Frederick F. b-1755 a few days prior to his father's death.

Why, you might ask, are we taking the time to get lost in a jungle of confusion? Because, I find myself in the unfortunate position of having to contradict the Omohundro Genealogical Record - and the ideas of many of the descendants of Frederick F. VL (1755) who for years have looked upon this CHART as correct.

To recapitulate the chain of events, Ann Klapp's appeal of 1906 addressed to Mr. R. W. Groom, included her concept as to her own connection with the VanL's of Jamaica. Mr. Groom made the CHART which he passed around to the family. In 1936, my late father sent it on to D. C. VanL. having first made one correction, namely identifying the husband of Mary Betts, and secondly, having credited this information to Arthur Terwilliger. (It now develops that Mr. Groom, having no children left his notes to A.T.- his nephew).

From D. C. VanL's sister, it came into the hands of Daisy Van Lew Omohundro who is the daughter of Newton (4C), and served as the source for the Van Lew Excursus in that Genealogy.

It is most unfortunate that W. Randolph van Liew did not have sufficient facts at his disposal to contradict as much of the letter as I am now in a position to do. It is likewise ironical that Ann P. Klapp and Daisy Van Lew are first cousins, and that after some 40 years, the statements of a well meaning, but confused young lady, should have come home to roost between the covers of her cousin's carefully compiled Omohundro Genealogical Record.

A copy of this report is being circulated among those members of the family who have been aware of my problem in getting this matter straightened out. Substantially, the same information will appear in the book for the following reason:- When one is forced to contradict a published work, it is best to honestly state the facts.

Daisy Van Lew (8J138)

One of the highlights of my research was meeting Daisy Van Lew Omohundro, of Goochland Va. Eighty one years young, she combines a PRIDE in FAMILY - a SENSE of PROPORTION, and an INTEREST in the FUTURE of her COUNTRY all too seldom encountered. ERvanL '56.

ITEM N.

PETER VAN LEW (5J49)

In Chapman.....History of Kent County...(book written in 1880) page 730 under Gaines township, William Kelley came in the fall of 1843 and after him followed Bryan Greenman.....Peter Van Lew.

First annual township meeting was held April 3, 1848, and Peter Van Lew received 35 votes for supervisor. He was supervisor from 1848 to 1853.

On page 753 is found the following:-

Peter Van Lew one of the oldest and most esteemed pioneers of this (Gaines) township, was born in Seneca Co. N. Y. Feb. 9, 1803. His father, Frederick F. Van Lew was born on Long Island, Feb. 5, 1755. He was a patriot of the Revolution and served three years and eight months under General Washington. He died Dec. 31, 1838, aged 84 years. His wife, Penelope Van Lew, was born in New Jersey and died Jan. 18, 1841. They had 12 children of whom Mr. Van Lew of this sketch was the eighth. He began an apprenticeship to the clothier's trade in Lodi, N. Y. at the age of 14, served seven years, and worked at the business 10 years after which he kept a "tavern" for about three and one-half years. He subsequently rented a fulling mill, carding machine and oil mill, which he operated four years and then purchased them. Meantime, he signed as security for three men to the amount of $9,000 and by their failure, was reduced to poverty. On November 1845, he came to this county (Kent) and settled on sec. 31, this township (Gaines) where he "took up" 311 acres of Uncle Sam's territory, still in its primitive state, and no road nearer than the old "Kalamazoo Stage Route". He went to Battle Creek and worked through the harvest season, and with the proceeds of his four week labor he bought three cows, a yoke of oxen, 10 bushels of wheat, a grain cradle and a dress for his wife. He returned with his riches to his home and family, who had spent the time of his absence in the woods, two miles from the nearest neighbors. He worked three harvest seasons at Battle Creek, devoting the remainder of the years to the improvement of his farm. He has cleared in all 225 acres of his farm. In 1854, he built a tavern 40 ft. wide by 65 ft. long and two stories high, which he continued to run as a hotel until 1876. In the early days, Indians were numerous and Pete, a famous deer hunter, spent one winter with Mr. Van Lew and kept him supplied with venison. The copper colored ramblers frequently camped on Mr. V's farm. He was one of the organizers of the township and elected its first supervisor, which office he held six successive terms and once since. He was married Dec. 30, 1829 to Anna Couch. She died April 1841, leaving three children--Silas H., Oscar G. and Mannaugh. Oscar was born in Lodi, N. Y. September 10, 1834, and was married August 24, 1870 to Mary E., daughter of Caleb and Delilah King, natives of New York, born June 4, 1844. Mannaugh was born at Lodi, April 17, 1841 and enlisted in the war of the Rebellion in the 126 Reg. N. Y. Vol. Aug. 8, 1862. He was in the engagements at Harper's Ferry, (where he was taken prisoner), Auburn Ford, Briston Station and Gettsburg, where all but 50 of his regiment were killed. He was commissioned 1st Lieut. of Co. C, 2d. U. S. Colored Cavalry; was wounded in skirmish at Suffolk, Va., March 9, 1864, and died 2 days after. Mr. Van Lew was again married June 26, 1842, to Fanny, daughter of Elijah and Elizabeth Baker, born in Yates Co., N. Y. September 10, 1810. They had one child--John, born in Lodi, Sept. 3, 1843. He was married Jan. 21, 1870, to Ellen, daughter of Wm. and Rhoda Barnum, born in Vermont, Dec. 30, 1847. They have three children--Nellie, born Dec. 11, 1871; Chas., born Aug. 6, 1874, and Fanny, born June 30, 1877. Mr. Van Lew has made a division of his estate among his sons and has retired from the burden of toil. He is an advocate of the principles of the National Party.

PETER G. VAN LEW (5J49)

ITEM P - Under the unfortunately chosen title -"Crazy Bet, Union Spy" the Virginia Cavalcade published the following about Elizabeth Louise Van Lew (7J103).

How She Served the Anti-Slavery and Unionist Causes, Was Rewarded with Political Offices by Republican Administrations, and Was Ostracized by Richmond Society

by James H. Bailey

ON Monday, April 3, 1865, proud Richmond fell before the Army of the United States. Early that morning, while whole blocks of the capital were still burning and blue-clad troops were marching into the burning city, an amazing sight was seen. From the roof of a stately, pillared mansion on Church Hill the Stars and Stripes fluttered in the breeze. A mob of hysterical citizens burst into the mansion's yard. They were met by a fiery little woman with flashing blue eyes and a wealth of hair which cascaded in ringlets. "Lower that flag or hurt one bit of this property," she screamed, "and I'll see that General Butler pays you back in kind—every one of you!"

At that very moment the soldiers of dreaded "Beast" Butler were entering the town. The mob knew this and dispersed. The little woman who had defied them would live on, an outcast in the city of her birth, until the century turned. She was Elizabeth Van Lew, Union spy.

Betty Van Lew, born in 1818, was the oldest of the three children of John Van Lew, a New Yorker of colonial Dutch descent who operated a hardware business in Richmond. The unusually handsome Van Lew home in Richmond was a hospitable center of culture in prewar days. Edgar Allan Poe is said to have given a reading in its drawing room, and in 1850 the "Swedish nightingale," Jenny Lind, sang for charity donations from its spacious rear verandah. Miss Lind's countrywoman, Fredrika Bremer, novelist and abolitionist, visited there and found a kindred soul in the strong-minded daughter of the house.

Betty had gone to school in Philadelphia. Her maternal grandfather, Hilary Baker, was the mayor of that metropolis. From it she had brought home a fierce hatred of human slavery. "Slave power," she said, "crushes freedom of speech and of opinion. Slave power degrades labor. Slave power is arrogant, is jealous and intrusive, is cruel, is despotic, not only over the slave but over the community, the state." Practicing what she preached, she gave freedom to nine of her family's slaves, and she bought others in order that they might be reunited with a husband or a wife already in the Van Lews' possession. It is even said that she established her own "underground railroad" to assist the escape of fugitive slaves, thus providing the foundation for the spy system she would eventually direct.

When John Brown was captured and hanged after his raid on the arsenal at Harpers Ferry, Elizabeth Van Lew's emotion overflowed. She had never thought the violence of that madman to have been justified, but she regarded him as "one who suffered so deeply from a sense of the wrongs of the slave that his strong head failed him under this heavy heart-pressure." When Virginia's lot was finally cast with the Confederacy, Miss Van Lew saw clearly her course of action. From the outset of hostilities she supplied valuable information to the Federal authorities.

At an early stage in the war she shrewdly managed the return of Mary Elizabeth Bowser, a slave girl whom she had sent North for schooling. Armed with excellent references, this girl was placed as a domestic in the "White House of the Confederacy," Jefferson Davis's official residence. From this strategic post she reported invaluable news of plans and maneuvers to Miss Van Lew, who, in turn, relayed the tidings to the Union's military intelligence.

How was this feat accomplished? We shall never know the full answer to that question. The United States War Department, at Miss Van Lew's request, turned over to her after the war all records in which she had been mentioned, and these she must have destroyed. Her diary, which for a long time was buried for safekeeping, is now in the New York Public Library, but it is only a fragmentary document, badly damaged. We know only that General Ulysses S. Grant assured her in writing, "You have sent me the most valuable information received from Richmond during the war."

Sometimes the messages were conveyed by agents from Union headquarters who were sent into Richmond for the purpose; again, Betty Van Lew seems to have had certain trusted assistants, such as a farmer of Charles City County named Babcock; the Unionists of Richmond, a small but undaunted minority, were always eager to help. Letters written by a Miss Eliza Jones of Richmond to her "dear uncle," Mr. James ap Jones at Norfolk, had a way of coming into the hands of General Butler at Fortress Monroe, and the "uncle's" replies to his "dear niece" wound up somehow at the Van Lew mansion on Church Hill. Upon the application of heat or acid to certain letters which seemed quite ordinary, news of great military consequence would appear between lines which reported commonplace tidings of births, deaths, and sickness. When Betty Van Lew died, there was discovered in the back of her watch a yellowed piece of paper on which were written the letters of her cipher code. This she had worn in lonely secrecy throughout nearly forty years.

Although her activities were never detected, Miss Van Lew was under constant surveillance by both local police and Confederate agents during the four years of conflict. "My life was in continued jeopardy," she wrote. "I was an enthusiast who never counted it dear if I could have served the Union—not that I wished to die."

Her dispatches to the Federal government gained in accuracy and value after she obtained permission to visit the Yankee prisoners who began to pour into Richmond. Libby Prison, standing practically at the base of Church Hill, was her particular project. She won the kind feelings of its commander, Lieutenant David Todd, Mrs. Abraham Lincoln's brother, by gifts to him of buttermilk and gingerbread. How much she learned from the prisoners we can only surmise. From the many-windowed prison in the heart of the city the inmates could observe many things connected with the movement of troops and supplies.

However, her ministrations to the captives were genuine and may have been the primary object of her visits to Libby Prison. A veritable angel of mercy, she marketed for them as regularly as for her own family, which now consisted only of her mother and brother, her father having died before the war. Choice books from the Van Lew library were distributed among the prisoners; often they were returned with a page number or a passage significantly marked. Money was expended lavishly to employ counsel for Union soldiers. The guards gave her little trouble, for she went about the prison in an apparently harmless way, muttering or singing softly to herself. Actually, she was cultivating deliberately the impression that she was feeble-minded. From this origin was derived her nickname, Crazy Bet.

She was credited with having constructed secret tunnels from her garden to Libby Prison in order to facilitate the escape of the inmates. This is an absurdity. However, the Van Lew mansion did possess a secret room in which Federal soldiers were sometimes harbored temporarily, until they could reach a safer haven. Betty's niece, as a little girl, once observed her aunt giving food to a man secreted there and, as an old woman, told the story. Betty herself, long years after the war, showed the room to a group of young people. It was a low and narrow cell behind a squared garret and under a sloping roof. This closet was entered through a spring door in the wall behind an antique chest of drawers.

One of Crazy Bet's kind deeds bore golden fruit, as we shall eventually see, some twenty years after the war. Thirteen Southerners, accused of piracy, were sentenced in New York to be hanged, but they claimed to be Confederate privateersmen and demanded that they be treated as prisoners of war. The Confederate government, espousing their cause, announced that, unless their claim was acknowledged, it would hang thirteen Federal officers in reprisal. These officers, among whom was Colonel Paul Revere of the 20th Massachusetts Regiment, were incarcerated in a special dungeon of Libby. Betty Van Lew communicated clandestinely with them and with their families, sending welcome news in both directions, and finally transmitted the happy tidings that they had been restored to the usual status of prisoners of war. The relatives of Colonel Revere did not forget.

Crazy Bet's most audacious deed was probably her plotting of the removal and secret reburial of the body of the Federal hero, Colonel Ulric Dahlgren, who had been killed while leading a surprise raid on Richmond in March, 1864. By order of the Confederate government the officer's corpse was brought into the city. It reposed in a boxcar at a railroad station until, at eleven o'clock one night, it was interred in an unannounced place. "The heart of every Unionist was stirred to its depths," wrote Miss Van Lew, "and to discover the hidden grave and remove his honored dust to friendly care was decided upon." From a Negro who had secretly observed the burial the location of the grave was ascertained. During a dark and rainy April night the body was disinterred and put in a metal casket which Betty Van Lew had purchased. This was placed in a nurseryman's wagon. Concealed under young peach trees, it was conveyed past several pickets to a Unionist's farm. There it was reinterred, the new grave being marked with the peach trees which had hidden the coffin. From start to finish Crazy Bet had engineered this somewhat ghoulish project. President Jefferson Davis was particularly embarrassed because, contrary to the Unionists' expectations, he had intended to send the body to Dahlgren's father upon demand.

In the final months of the war Betty Van Lew's activities appear to have been more vigorous than ever. There were five relay stations for her messengers between Richmond and Grant's headquarters at City Point. So efficiently did the chain operate that flowers picked in her Church Hill garden in the morning were on his table in the evening. Her emissaries, usually Negroes, employed various means to bear their dispatches—occasionally in a slit shoe sole or in a hollow eggshell placed in a basket of eggs. Sometimes the intricate pattern of a piece of dress goods carried by a seamstress disclosed a valuable secret. The special guard assigned by Grant to protect Miss Van Lew during the fall of Richmond found her rummaging for information among the deserted Confederate archives. She never had become cautious of her personal safety.

During his occupation of the city Grant paid lengthy visits to the Van Lew mansion. He gave the services of Crazy Bet material recognition when, in March, 1869, only fifteen days after his inauguration as President, he appointed her postmistress of Richmond. In this capacity she served until the commencement of the presidential administration of Rutherford B. Hayes. She then secured a position in the Post Office Department at Washington, but this was not continued after the advent of a Democrat, Grover Cleveland, to the White House. She returned to her native city to be shunned and despised, doubly so because she had served as a Republican officeholder after having been an anti-Confederate informer.

Her financial needs, which were great, were cared for in her last years by the friends and relatives of that Colonel Revere whom she had succored when he was a Confederate captive. But, socially, she was punished savagely. "I live," she wrote, "and have lived for years as entirely distinct from the citizens as if I were plague-stricken." When her mother died in September, 1875 there were not friends enough to be pallbearers. The human sound which she heard the most was the word, "Witch, witch," shrieked at her from a discreet distance by the urchins of Church Hill, and her companions, other than a faithful niece, were forty cats. A crusader always, she adopted the cause of woman's suffrage and startled Richmond ever and anon by her outbursts in the local press against the taxation of females without representation. Every year her tax payment was accompanied by a written protest, but it was paid in full despite her objections on principle. In her militant advocacy of this reform, as in her earlier championship of freedom for the slaves, she was a generation ahead of many Virginians. Neither effort made her popular.

This highly controversial but clever and courageous woman was released by death on September 25, 1900, from a life which had become a grim ordeal. Her Massachusetts friends marked her grave in Richmond's Shockoe Cemetery. There, on a bronze tablet, are these words: "She risked everything that is dear to man—friends, fortune, comfort, health, life itself—all for the one absorbing desire of her heart, that slavery might be abolished and the Union preserved." / / /

The Van Lew Residence on Church Hill in 1866

AN OBSERVATION

It is interesting to note that 52 years after her death, Virginia can say to Elizabeth L. Van Lew: "I do not forgive you, but I must admit you are a person who would not sacrifice her principles and had the fortitude to live by them in the face of overwhelming odds"

Item Q:

The letter that follows was written by Annie Randolph Van Lew (8J134) age 10, living in the Van Lew home on the top of Church Hill, Richmond, between 23rd and 24th Streets, on Grace. Written to her Aunt Anna in Philadelphia. A copy of this was given to General Grant when he visited the house the following day, and was the first description of the capture of the city which he had read. It is mentioned in his Memoirs. (This explanatory note added by the son of the writer, Col. Ernest James Hall.)

Dear Auntie: I will try and give you a good description of the Evacuation. But I am afraid that it will contain many faults. Sunday the second of April 1865. No one went from here to church but Cousen Tillie MCreary - she went to St John's. She had been gone only a few moments, when we were surprized to see her comeing back. She said that soon after she went in a small boy came after Mr. Stokes. nothing was thought of this but when first one gentlemen, and then another left, the ladies were much perplexed. Their anxiety for their friends, was soon allayed by Mr. Norwood, who told them that the Yankees would be in the city that afternoon or the next morning.

Great excitement prevailed. The ladies feared that the soldiers would pil-lage their houses. Therefore, a great many were hideing their silver. Many of the neighbors sent theirs to us begging that we would secret it for them. Grandma put hers away, and Cousen Tillie was busy packing her things nearly all the afternoon. John Handcock, who had escaped from prison, was hidden here. We kept him busy putting ours and the neighbors silver in the dark closet. We retired quite early, but were not to sleep that night at least Grandma Auntie and I did not. The rest did I beleave untill the explosion of the gun boat Patrick Henry about three o'clock in the morning. Soon after the explosion, Katie Balian came over in our room saying we are blown up in our beds. Sister was much frighten too, for she roused from sound slumber by the noise. She and the servant who slept in the room with he thought the house was on fire. Sunday night the Rebels started with the prisoners South. Some of them escaped and then came here. So that for a while, our front door bell rang every few minutes. Katie going to the door in her stocking feet for fear that some one might be lurking around, and would see the poor creatures who had come to us to shield them. It seem to me that day would dawn, the night had been so long. It seemed to me a night dream I will never forget. We rose about 5 o'clock, I was but half dressed when I happened to glance out of the window, and saw a large part of the business portion of the city in flames. I did not stop to dress, but with Sister ran to the top of the house. We came down finished dressing, then went into the parlour to see the prisoners. Beds having been made for them there, we had just seated ourselves at the breakfast table. When we heard the tune Yankee Doodle. Sister and I ran to the bottom of the garden and were overjoyed to see the Yankees marching up Main Street. But I must not forget to mention, that the Rebels threatened to set our house on fire. Auntie went out on the front porch. and said if this house goes every house in the neighborhood should follow.

The Federals had been in the City. But a few moments. When they put guards all around the house to protect us. When Sister heard the threats about burning our house. We came up stairs, packed up all of our clothes in a carpet bag, and others in sheets, and carried them down in the yard. Katie made us take them back and put them away. At this our little hearts were full. As soon after breakfast as we could Auntie Sister, and I went up town. Went down Main Street first. There we saw the soldiers. Auntie spoke to many of them and even hugged the horses. I will never forget how she looked with that huge bonnet on which we thought was very fashionable. Auntie sent me back for the carriage, we then went up Broad St. to the Square. Such a scene as presented itself beyond description. Scattered here and there were seated groups of persons of both sexes, and colors with as much of their property as they could save by them. The next place we went to was the Capitol. We went all over this place into the library and everywhere. then to the Governors house where found a little dog. it owner soon came to claim it. The Excutive Mansion was set on fire three or four times. But Mr. Rulie the gardener, succeeded in distinguishing it. We spent the best part of the day in the Square. On our way home we met Dr. Ascok. who told us his office ---we ask to bring his things up here, which he did. Several officers came to see us in the afternoon. The servants all went down town in the morning and when we came home they had lots of things to show that they had picked up in the street. These were thrown from the burning stores. Some had boxes of little pipes, and notebooks. others had flour, hams, and calicoe.

We went to bed early being very tired this closed this eventful day.

The Third of April 1865.

ITEM R.

From Frederick Dewey Van Lew (8J154) we have :-

"---my Gr-grandfather was Charles Van Lew (Lieu) who hailed from somewhere near a place called Van Lew's (Lieu's) Corners, N.J. You may be interested in knowing that my Gr-grandfather migrated to Pa. and was captured and held prisoner by the Indians for a goodly number of years before his marriage. He was released from captivity due to the fact that he discovered in the Appalachian Mountains a vein of lead which was later used by the tribe for weapon purposes. -- my uncle William G. -- being credited in the State of Oklahoma with the invention of the concrete telegraph pole about fifty years ago."

✓ HENDRICK VAN LAWA (2H1)

This second son of the Frederick of 1670 married Gertje Cortelyou, a daughter of Jaques Cortelyou and a granddaughter of Jaques Cortelyou the Immigrant of 1652, the Cortelyous being French Huguenots, as they are always referred to as being, in the historical references made to Jaques the Immigrant in American books, but in reality, they were Walloons, or Walloon French.

Hendrick Van Liew lived at one time on Staten Island, as is indicated by the records of the Staten Island Dutch Reformed Church, two of his children having been baptised in this church.

The entries in Hendrick's Dutch Bible, in the writer's possession, indicate he had five children--

Dina
Maritje
✓ Frederick
Aaltje
Lonah

The son, Frederick (3H4), married Maritje van der Bilt, one of the Vanderbilt family, one of the descendants of which, in the person of Commodore Vanderbilt, made the name famous.

✓ Frederick (3H4) and Maritje, his wife, came to New Jersey, where Frederick's (3H4) uncle Frederick (2F1) had come some years before, and settled on the outskirts of the present city limits of New Brunswick. It was the writer's belief it was on land on which the present VAN LIEW CEMETERY is located. This could probably be checked at Trenton by searching for the earliest recorded Deeds. On the writer's first visit to this Cemetery in 1921, he was told by the caretaker that the land had been given by one Henry Van Liew who owned the Cemetery and the surrounding land and after whom the cemetery was named. Jaques' (4H8) stone is in this Cemetery in the old part, behind the Office. It is the oldest stone in this Cemetery.

✓ The old Dutch Bible of Hendrick (2H1) and Gertjie Cortelyou Van Liew, owned now by the writer, is a huge volume, measuring seventeen inches in length, ten inches in width and five inches in depth. It is bound with thin wooden boards covered with figured leather, which, is a wonderful testimony to the skill of the tanners of 236 years ago, being in a perfect state of preservation. The hinges and the four corner supports and the clasp are all of brass. In all, it is a very handsome and expensively gotten up book, published in Leyden in 1718, and apparently sent for by Hendrick after his marriage. See Item A, p-111

✓ The entries and descriptions are written in Dutch for Hendrick (2H1) and Gertjie and their five children. Frederick (3H4) the only son, inherited this Bible, and brought it to New Jersey, his entries, in his handwriting, are also all in Dutch, now in fading but perfectly legible ink.

Frederick's (3H4) son Hendrick (4H7) who married Margrit Cornell, apparently next inherited the Bible, while, the last entries in it are the births of the children of Hendrick (5H25) and Elizabeth Voorhees, the last being in the year 1822, or 109 years ago. (W.R.vL 1931).

It is unknown in whose hands the Bible was for some 65 to 70 years, or from 1822 to about 1890. About 1890, a friend of the writer's father, himself keenly interested in all matters genealogical, bought the book and gave it to the writer then a boy in his teens, who likewise had commenced to show interest in this subject. This friend had attended, out of curiosity, the vendue sale of the effects of an old negro recently deceased. This old Bible was found in the old negro's garret and was bid in at five dollars and presented to the writer thinking it would give the clue as to who was the father of Johannes (3F8), which was then for a certainty, unknown to us. It was many years later that the writer learned who had originally owned the Bible, that is, the original owner's connection with the writer. The negro was evidently a slave, or the son of one of the Van Liew slaves.

Hendrick (2H1) spelled his name, and entered those of his children as—

Van Lawa (pronounced in English - van Lahvah)

Hendrick's (2H1) son Frederick (3H4) spelled his own and his children's names, in his handwriting—

Van Leuwe - and the next generation - Van Liew

* * * * *

Subsequent to the writing of the above, in leafing through one of the volumes of the Somerset County Quarterly, the writer noticed "Some Unrecorded Deeds" that were in the possession of the Editor and there re-produced. Glancing over the pages his eye caught the name "Van Liew". There were two Deeds, un-recorded, concerning the Descendants of Hendrick (2H1) Frederick (3H4). The two Deeds read as follows:-

"1798, December 31st: Hendrick Van Liew, Jaques Van Liew, Frederick Van Liew, John Van Liew and Peter Van Liew to Jeremiah Van Liew and Roeloff Van Liew. Recites that Frederick Van Liew, late of Middlebush, father of the above named parties, by his will of October 24th, 1796, devised lands to his seven sons and that they having made division of the premises the parties of the first part conveyed to the parties of the second part, 154.9 acres adjoining the Middlebush Road, John Wyckoff, Ram Garrison, Harmanis Cortelyou.

Witnesses - Peter Voorhees, Nicholas Bodine"

The second Deed:-

"1822, April 22nd. Ralph Van Liew of Middlebush to Jeremiah Van Liew of same place. Recites that both parties, being equally entitled to an undivided half part of certain land at Middlebush, and having made partition between themselves, the grantor quit claims to the grantee two tracts, one of 58.65 acres the other of 18.6 acres. Witnesses etc."

The first of the above Deeds establishes the fact that Hendrick's (2H1) son Frederick (3H4) and his wife Maritje van der Bilt Van Liew, lived at Middlebush.

It also places Ralph Van Liew, who, up to now, could not be identified as his birth is not recorded in the big Bible, nor his baptism to be found in the church records.

This confusion in the writer's (WRvL's) mind as to where Frederick (3H4) had lived when he came over from Long Island, was increased through the evident confusion in the memory and writings of Judge Ralph Voorhees in the "Fredonian" of April 29, 1875, found elsewhere. In one place, Judge Voorhees says, speaking of the children of Frederick (2F1) and Helena de Nyse;- ""Frederick born Feb. 5, 1727; married - Hendrickson, was succeeded by his son Frederick, grandson Frederick and he by P.S. Brokaw on the Homestead. His land extended from the Middlebush road to about half way to Millstone. He died May 25th, 1758.""

Now the above dates given by Judge Voorhees of Frederick's (2F1) and Helena's eldest son Frederick (3F5) are correct, but from the best information available, confirmed by the recent discovery of his fieldstone headstone at Three Mile Run, this son, who died at the age of 31 years, lived and died at the original homestead at Three Mile Run. Apparently, Judge Voorhees confused the son of Frederick (2F1) with the Frederick of Middlebush who was the son of Hendrick (2H1). This confusion on the Judge's part is explainable considering that every Van Liew family then had a Frederick.

In a recent (April 1931) visit to the Denice van Liew (3F6) - Drew - now Kline, farm with Mr. Jacob Wyckoff, formerly of Middlebush, and on whose farm the South Middlebush Cemetery stands, he pointed out the "Frederick Van Liew farm, later owned by P. S. Brokaw".

The Denice Van Liew farm (part of the #3 Harrison Subdivision) is the second place on the left, on the road after it crosses the railroad tracks on the way to Franklin Park, it was later the Drew and is now the Kline farm. "The Frederick Van Liew place, later the P. S. Brokaw place", as pointed out by Mr. Wyckoff, is almost across the road from the Kline farm, but nearer the railroad tracks - a large house and barns sitting back from the road about two or three hundred yards.

Combining the information derived from the Unrecorded Deed, as above, with Judge Voorhees' information in his article of 1875, and Mr. Wyckoff's information of 1931, it is quite clear that Frederick (3H4) Van Liew and Maritje Van der Bilt his wife who came from Long Island, lived on this property, their Homestead, opposite his cousin Denice's home, now the Kline farm, and that almost the whole of the village of Middlebush, including the church and railway station, were built on Frederick's (3H4) land, and further, that Frederick's (3H4) land extended half way to Millstone, let us say for two miles, down the left side of the Amwell Road or, until it met the lands of his cousin Cornelius (3F7) Van Liew, which ran from Frederick's for about another two miles or until they reached the Millstone River, the village of East Millstone and the Church being built on Cornelius' lands.

The above solves a problem that has long baffled the writer.

Apparently Jacob (4H11) was not living when Frederick (3H4) made the will referred to in the above Deed. See page 1114 . Item C.

Of the seven sons mentioned in the Will of October 24th, 1796, we now know that Jaques owned the land at the other side of New Brunswick where the VAN LIEW CEMETERY is located and where he and some of his family are buried, and where, at one time, the writer thought Frederick (3H4), his father, must have settled. We know that Jeremiah, Ralph and Frederick lived at or near Middlebush. Where Johannes (4H15) lived, we do not know, but we are aware that Hendrick (4H7) and Peter (4H16) moved to New York State after the Sullivan Campaign.

In an old map of New Brunswick, seen as is remembered, in the old Records of Amboy, both the above Hendrick and Jaques are shown, and spoken of as owning land in the present city limits near the center of New Brunswick.

Frederick (3H4) and Maritje, could have used either the Cedar Grove Cemetery which was across the road from the lower end of their lands, or the South Middlebush Cemetery, which was on the same road as their house stood, and only about half a mile further down the road.

Since Frederick (3H4), Jeremiah (4H10) and Ralph (4H19) and Frederick's (4H13) son called Jeremiah (5H37) are interred in the old part of the South Middlebush Cemetery, we believe Frederick (3H4), the father, also used it.

Frederick Van Liew (3H4) had a child Maria, baptised at New Brunswick in 1764. A field-stone headstone in the S. Middlebush Cemetery, the oldest in the Yard, has an M cut on it with a chisel, and a year, the first three figures of which are plainly 176 and the fourth less distinct that looks like an 0, but which may be a 6. It is the writer's belief that this is the stone of Maria Van der Bilt, wife of Frederick (3H4).

The New Brunswick Church records show further that a Frederick Van Liew and Cathlene had a son Roelf baptised Jan. 26, 1775. The dates on the headstone of Ralph Van Liew, in the S. Middlebush Cemetery makes it certain that the above Roelf and Ralph are the same persons, thus proving Maria must have died after 1764, and that Ralph was the child of a second wife named Cathlene.

Ralph's Will at Somerville, will possibly give the name of his wife, possibly also of any children.

At the State House, Trenton, is a Will of a Charity Van Liew, made in 1800, probated in 1802. This Will states she was a widow of Franklin Township. The Will disposes of her personal property, including two slave women. Mention is made of her daughter Mary Van Liew, a daughter "Charity Stothoff", a granddaughter Elinor Bordine, two sons Roelof and Peter, two nephews Peter C. and John C. Wyckoff, also Gitty daughter of John Van Liew, to her sister Elizabeth Hagaman, and the balance of her estate is willed to her "beloved brother Simon Wyckoff."

Peter Wyckoff, one of the four sons of Cornelius who bought #5 Lot of the Harrison Tract, and who lived on the Western half of the part of #5 that was between the Middle Road and the Millstone River, where the S. Middlebush Cemetery is, had eight or ten children and among them a Geertje (Gertrude or Charity) and a Simon... In the Wyckoff notes in the Somerset Quarterly, it states Geertje married Frederick Van Liew.

The records of the Baptisms at New Brunswick show that Peter Wyckoff had a daughter baptised February 4, 1728. This Geertje or Charity, is interred at the S. Middlebush Cemetery as well as the above mentioned Mary. The above Elinor Bordine was a daughter of Dinah Van Liew and Nicholas Bodine.

In Book 37, page 15, at Trenton, is the Will of Frederick Van Lewe, Will probated 1797, Inventory of 885 pounds, 12 shillings, 0 pence, Will dated 24th October 1796, that is the Will of Frederick Van Liew (3H4).

This Will mentions his "beloved wife Geertje" who was to live with the son Roelof in the house where Frederick was then living, Roelof and Jeremiah to pay her board. Mention is made of his sons Hendrick, Johannes, Peter, Jaques, and Frederick, also of his daughter Mary, his granddaughter Elinor Bordine. All his lands were to be divided between his seven sons, equally.

The cleared lands were valued at 7 pounds per acre, the cleared lands without buildings at 6 pounds per acre. The executors were his son Frederick and his son-in-law Nicholas Bodine.

Apparently then, Frederick (3H4) had three wives, Maria Van der Bilt, according to the big Dutch Bible who, according to the Bible and to the Church baptismal records was the mother of all his children except Roelof or Ralph, whose mother according to the church records was a "Cathleen" apparently the Hendricksen erroneously mentioned by Judge Ralph Voorhees in the "Fredonian" as the wife of Frederick (3F5), and Geertje (Geertea, on her headstone) Wyckoff who survived him by five years, and who apparently was the mother of none of his children.

From the "Unrecorded Deed" of Dec. 31, 1798, referred to previously, there were evidently 542.15 acres left to be divided "equally between seven sons".

Item B:

The following was furnished to the AUTHOR by Mr. Don Carlos Van Liew (8H239) under date of January 5, 1934:-

Hendrick (4H7) together with his brothers Frederick (4H13) and Peter (4H16) moved out to New York State after the Sullivan Campaign. Hendrick (4H7) settled in Seneca County. Carolyn (8H238) sister of Don Carlos Van L. had in her possession a Deed transferring certain lands from the King of England to a certain Henry Van Liew - apparently Henry (4H7).

Most of the descent of the children of Hendrick (4H7) and his son Hendrick (5H25) was gathered at the cost of research and travel by Mr. Don Carlos Van Liew (8H239).

Item C:

The following data has been furnished by Miss Adeline Gordon of New Brunswick, who is a great, great granddaughter of Jaques Van Liew.

The baptismal records of the Franklin Park (Six Mile Run) Church give the date of Jaques' baptism as 1743. Jaques' Bible gives his birth as October 20, 1749. In the ancient Dutch Bible (Item A of this section) Frederick (3H4) recorded in his own hand the birth of a son -

"Jacob, geboren October 20, 1794"

Where this discrepancy came from, the AUTHOR could not tell, believing that perhaps some one had entered the date of birth in Jaques' Bible after Jaques had died. The problem intrigued your co-author with the result that-

1. He learned from the experts of the New York Public Library that the names Jacob (Jacobus) have the same root as the name Jaques.
2. That the baptismal entry can be wrong. This coupled with--
3. The fact that it would have been extremely unlikely for a father to record the birth of one twin - Hendrick (4H7), and ignore the second twin - Jaques (4H8) in the Bible, - and due to the fact that Jaques' date of birth is identical to that of Jacob - (Jacobus) - as recorded in the same Bible - that Jaques (4H8) and Jacob (4H11) are one and the same person. For the sake of expediency the record is carried on under the name of "Jaques".

Jaques VAN LIEW'S family Bible Records:-

Births - Jaques Van Liew born October 20, 1749

Caroline Van Liew (5H29) daughter of Jaques van Liew (4H8) married Peter Gordon October 26, 1808. Their children as appearing in the Bible are listed in their proper place in the Genealogical Section.

Garret Van Liew (son of Jaques Van Liew) m, Helena Van Liew, daughter of Frederick Van Liew (4F11).

Item D:

In the Spring of 1931, a New York postman delivered a letter addressed to E. R. van Liew, 80 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. C. - to Dr. C.C. Van Liew - 60 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. C.

Dr. C. C. Van Liew (7H184) found E. R. van L (your co-author) and through this contact, the AUTHOR first learned of the Van Liew Association of Auburn New York - descendants of Daniel Perrine Van Liew (5H40) - and that some 60 - 80 members held an annual Van Liew reunion picnic on the last Saturday in June. (In 1955, 24 years later that picnic was held on the last Sunday of June - and there were over 50 members present.)

The above meeting was the AUTHOR'S introduction to Miss Clara N. Loveland, whose mother was a Miss Van Liew and who supplied certain invaluable facts pertaining to Frederick (4H13).

1. A letter written by her grandfather from his Civil War Camp, in which he stated that HIS father, then visiting him, contemplated stopping off at New Brunswick on the way home to visit friends and relatives. This was taken by the family that the Van Liews of Auburn were somehow related to those of New Jersey.

2. She located the grave and Headstone of Frederick Van Liew, interred in the now deserted Cemetery at Scipio New York. The inscription reads-

June 20th, 1835, age 82 years, one month.

This would have made the deceased born May 20th 1753.

In the records of the baptisms of the Reformed Dutch Church at New Brunswick, N. J., there is recorded-

BAP. June 3rd, 1753, Frederick, Frederick Van Leun and Maria

The two above are the same person.

The identity of the wife of Frederick (4H13) baffled the author, and it was not until the co-author visited Miss Loveland in 1955 that this question was definitely answered. The key was in the Bible belonging to Eliza Hoagland whose record is transcribed herewith:-

(Note - this is not an exact copy - merely from notes)

Frederick Van Liew born 1753 May 20th, m, Dec. 22, 1774 Charity Ten Eycke b, May 31, 1756.

Frederick & Edith Prine m, May 16, 1793

" & Maria Brokaw m, April 30, 1803

" & Maria Sebring (widow of Joseph Williams) m, Sept. 4, 1811.

Thomas Hoagland and Ida Van Liew m, Feb. 9, 1826

Mariah b, April 4, 1776

Else b, Nov. 2, 1779

Frederick b, Feb. 14, 1782

Conrad b, 1784

It thus appears that the author, who was concerned with one wife, actually had four to recon with. It is interesting to note, however, that the author had figured out that there were at least two wives involved. He could not, without the above Bible record, hope to correctly account for all of the children - nor allocate each child to its proper mother.

Item E:

The only children of Peter (4H16) that came to the author's attention were numbers 5H52, 5H54 and 5H59. The additional information appearing in this book was gathered by Lillian B. Van Liew (7H224) and supplied to the co-author by her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Van Liew Shoemaker.

Item F:

The family Bible records of Frederick Van Liew (5H33) and his son Ezekiel Parker Van Liew (6H87) were supplied by Mrs. Mabel (Finch) Arneson.

Item G:

From Sylvester Eugene Van Liew we learn that his grandfather Willard fought in the Civil War on the Union side -- "was a prisoner of the South, imprisoned in the famous Libby prison; and my recollection is that my parents told me he passed away shortly after the close of the war; that he was in deplorable physical condition when released from the Libby prison, and the cause of death was Tuberculosis."

I am still speculating on whether Elizabeth L. Van Liew (7J103) ever met Willard C. Van Liew (6H133) in the Libby - while she ministered to the Union soldiers incarcerated therein. See Item P. page 73.

ERvan L. - 1956

Item H:

There are four Van Liew families in Bloomsburg, Pa. who I believe descend from John Van Liew (6H128). Of all those contacted they are the only ones who as a group have refused to reply to my inquiries. Mention is made of this fact lest their descendants blame me for having excluded them.

ERvan L - 1956

FREDERICK VAN LIEW (2F1)

Third son of Frederick of 1670

Frederick Van Liew (2F1) was seven years old when his father, Frederick of 1670, purchased land in "ye Jerseys", and eleven years later we find his father's will, stating this land to have been already deeded to him. He was twenty three years old when he married Helena De Nyse in 1717—she then a girl of 17 years, and we must suppose him to have been in New Jersey, probably two years at least, prior to his marriage.

Frederick's land was covered with primeval forest (some of which can still be seen as it was, now in 1931). Before marrying and bringing his wife over from Long Island, a house had first to be built and enough land cleared of forest to sow the grain and plant the vegetables that would enable them to live. There was plenty of deer, bear and other game in the forest that would supply them with meat.

Trees had to be felled, the trunks and limbs burned, the stumps pulled before grain could be sown. For this purpose, in New Jersey, it was customary to use slave labor. Statistics show that as early as 1715 there were some 1500 slaves in New Jersey. Large tracts had to be cleared rapidly of forest to permit sowing of the ground. Some families had as many as forty slaves though this was an unusually large number. Before 1800 the number of slaves had risen in New Jersey to 11,500. We must assume, therefore, that like the others, Frederick (2F1) employed slave labor to clear the necessary, or desired amount of land.

During the years of preparation, no doubt before his marriage, one of Frederick's (2F1) sisters, Greta, married Jan Stryker and they had bought from Peter Cortelyou, 300 acres of land for 300 pounds. These 300 acres lay on the part of lot #7 that fronted on the Indian Path. They were about 2 miles away from Frederick's lands. Another sister, Mary, married Jacob Probasco, the son of Stoeffel, whose lands adjoined Frederick's. Frederick, therefore, had two of his sisters living near him.

To help one form an idea of what the country was like in 1700, it is a matter of history that a traveler seeking to go with an Indian guide from the ford of the Raritan (New B-) to the Falls of the Delaware (Trenton) got lost in the forests and the two of them had to retrace their steps to the Raritan and start over. When Frederick came to take possession of his lands in about 1715, there were only four or five houses to be seen along the Indian Path between the ford of the Raritan and the Falls of the Delaware. A Mr. Alexander, in writing to ex-Governor Hunter in England, in 1730, says, "The road from New Brunswick to the Delaware was lined with comfortable looking farm houses with white fences, whereas, in 1715, when I traveled that road before, there were only four or five houses between the Raritan and the Delaware".

After the marriage of Frederick and Helena De Nyse, when they started for their home in "ye Jerseys", they took the route traveled then, and for years afterwards, by all who journeyed from New York to the Delaware. Crossing the ferry on Long Island at the point now Fort Hamilton in Bay Ridge, by way of the Narrows, and on the ferry owned by Helena's father (who owned the first ferry across the Narrows) they journeyed at that early period, by horses, across Staten Island by way of what, in 1931, is known as the Amboy Road, to a point opposite Perth Amboy where they took a boat up the river to the point known as Raritan Landing at the upper end of New Brunswick. Later, when roads were made, instead of taking boat up the river, it was possible to go by wagon. The site of the Ferry at Perth Amboy is in 1931, the same as it was then, and is at the end of the principle business street of Perth Amboy.

Arriving at the Raritan Landing, they took horses and rode along the Indian Path, then more winding than it became later, for about three miles till they came to their home which stood opposite the little log church then standing alongside the present Three Mile Run Cemetery,--possibly one of those "four or five houses" Mr. Alexander saw in 1715 that he mentions in his letter to ex-Governor Hunter. Frederick was one of the leaders in this church as evidenced by the fact that he, and Hendrick Vroom of the Landing, were appointed a committee of two to build a new church for Dominie Frelinghuysen to occupy when he arrived from Holland.

Frederick and Helena, their sons Frederick and Johannes, and some of Johannes' children and grandchildren are interred in this little cemetery that stood opposite their home.

The first home was undoubtedly like the first home of all those earliest settlers--of logs. Then came a frame house presumably of the type described elsewhere by Judge Voorhees. (As Johannes had a house and barns burnt by the British when Cornwallis and De Heister withdrew from the Millstone and Middlebush trying to burn everything in their path preparatory to Lord Howe's evacuation of New Brunswick, it is presumed the Homestead was then burned and re-built by Johannes. Johannes' daughter Ann who married her cousin Johannes D (4F14) succeeded Johannes, then Ann's daughter Ida who married a Voorhees. This Abraham Voorhees and Ida Van Liew had no children, the farm was willed to Abraham J. Voorhees their nephew and namesake, this Abraham J. Voorhees was the father of Sarah V. Clark (Mrs. John S.) who was as well a great granddaughter of Frederick, eldest son of Johannes, so that the property has been uninterruptedly, since 1701, in the hands of one of Frederick's of 1670, descendants. Both house and barns have been struck by lightning, and rebuilt, in the past 50/60 years.)

Frederick (3F5), eldest son of Frederick and Helena, apparently lived and died at the Homestead, he is buried alongside of his father.

When Denice (3F6), their son, married, he apparently was given that part of Lot #3 which borders on the Middle Road, the first place on the left after crossing the R. R. at Middlebush Station. While another of their sons, Cornelius (3F7), had that part of Lot #3 bordering on the Millstone River, on the south side of the Amwell Road, running back half way to Middlebush. Johannes (3F8) remained on the Homestead.

Ten years before his death, Frederick (2F1) was the largest land and stock owner in Franklin Township being assessed for 800 acres of land. We do not know if this was exclusive of what his sons Denice and Cornelius owned. To obtain the atmosphere of the times of Frederick and his sons, we here include the charming description of that period by Judge Ralph Voorhees, born in 1796.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

in

NEW JERSEY

Note:

In 1931, Mrs. Sarah Voorhees Clark, of New Brunswick and Middlebush, lent the writer a bound copy of "OUR HOME", a monthly magazine published in Somerville, N. J. in the year 1873, and now out of print. A copy is at the N. J. Historical Society's Headquarters in Newark.

To "OUR HOME", Judge Ralph Voorhees contributed twelve papers on "The Raritan and its Early Holland Settlers".

Judge Voorhees was born in 1796 and was thus 77 years old when he wrote these articles. Honeyman, Editor of "OUR HOME" refers to him in an Editorial, as the source, many times unacknowledged, of much of the historical data used by others in writing of early times. He was, then, but two generations distant from the time Frederick Van Liew ^{2F1}, a youth of 23, brought his bride, Helena de Nyse, a girl of 17, to her new home along the Indian Path (long before that path was turned into a wagon road, later a turnpike, then the Lincoln Highway.)

Judge Voorhees, as a boy, listened to the tales spun around the fire-sides of his elders, who, many of them, both friends and relatives, took part in the Revolutionary War. He was so near those earliest times of our forbears in New Jersey, that he had the true perspective to write of them.

While the following pages do not strictly belong to Genealogical data, I have here and there, from these twelve articles, thought it well to take that which pertains to the Historical, in general, as it is the best, and probably the most accurate, description of those times I have ever read.

They are included in the Van Liew Genealogical data being collected, as they enable one, and will help following generations to form a mental picture of the conditions of life, the amusements, the habits and trials of our forefathers in New Jersey, and in the hope that, to succeeding generations of Van Liews, the delightfully worded and described (by Judge Voorhees) life in those earliest times will be one of the same fascinating interest it has always been to the writer.

WRVL

Excerpts from the 12 articles by Judge Ralph Voorhees

The transmission of events, past and present, to future generations has been enjoined by Divine authority. The Creator and Disposer of all things, through one of his servants, the prophet Joel, spoke thus: "Hear this, ye old men, and give ear all ye inhabitants of the land: Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers? Tell your children of it, and let your children tell it to their children, and their children to another generation." In some humble way I also wish to be an instrument, to the extent of my information, as derived from traditions, old papers, searches, etc,- of aiding to make up the full history of the Raritan and its early settlers.

Raritan is an Indian name, accented on the first and last syllables, thus Rar-i-tan. It was pronounced by the Dutch, Roriton. Here on the banks of the river, the "red man pursued the panting deer and wooed his dusky mate", revenged himself on his enemies, lavished kindness on his friends, lived in fact thru unknown centuries, died here, and was buried.

The Raritan, on its early settlement, was navigable up to the point where the North and South Branch of the river connect. Then, and long afterward, much of the heavy produce was conveyed to market by water. In seasons of freshets, the farmers up the river conveyed their grain to New Brunswick in flat-bottomed boats, floating them down stream one day, and rowing or pulling them back the next. The owners of the cargoes accompanied them along the banks with their teams, carrying thus separate wagon loads in addition, and attending to the unloading.

Many years previous to the settlement of the Raritan by the whites, the Indians had a path running thru the State, extending from the Falls of the Delaware at Trenton to the first fording place across the Raritan, near the head of tide water - now New Brunswick. From thence it ran to Elisabethtown, in the vicinity of New York. It is described in many of the old Deeds as the Indian Path. (This is now the Lincoln Highway, the boundary between Somerset and Middlesex counties WRVL). Its course was along the highest grounds, and it crossed the various streams in the driest and most favorable places thereby avoiding the broadest and wettest meadows. It struck ravines as nearly opposite to each other as possible, by which it was made to avoid steep hills. They thus easily carried to market their furs and other saleable articles, and this accounts for the many creeks and bends on the roads afterward laid out upon it.

The largest land-owners on the Raritan, when the land began to be subdivided, were Peter Sonmans, who possessed 23,700 acres (or 37 sq. miles) on the west side of the Millstone River, in the present townships of Hillsborough and Montgomery, and John Harrison who owned 17,500 acres (27½ sq. miles) on the east side of the Millstone, in the present township of Franklin, extending from the Millstone to the most southerly portion of the Indian Path, and running over into Middlesex. (It was one of the Harrison subdivisions, or lots, that Frederick Hendricksen Van Liew, the immigrant of 1670, bought for his son Frederick, in 1701 (Nov. 17) when the latter was 7 years old. WRVL).

The next largest tract (adjoining that of Harrison's) was in Middlesex County and was also owned by Peter Sonmans. It contained 15,600 acres. (For further subdivisions, see Corwin's map accompanying his Historical Discourse of 1866. N. J. Hist. Soc.). Royce claimed to own 20,000 acres on which the railroad station of Roycefield now stands.

The Indians along the Raritan maintained the most friendly intercourse with the whites. They supplied the latter with furs, game, fish, and other articles for which in return they received articles fit and necessary for their use.

John Harrison was succeeded as land owner by John Berrian, who doubtless erected the house at Rocky Hill in which General George Washington wrote his farewell address. (In 1931, this is known as the Rockingham place, an old colonial structure, which Washington made his headquarters after the battle of Princeton, which has had its interior restored, and the D.A.Rs of Princeton are collecting funds for a complete restoration WRVL).

Among the worthy women of the early days of which I write, distinguished for their Christian and moral excellences, Mrs. Alche Schenck, wife of Christian Van Doren, deserves particular mention. She was the mother of seventeen children (she was the gr-gr-gr grandmother of Hannah V.L. of Flemington and of Mrs. John S. Clark of New B- and Middlebush and grandmother of the Christianus of Woodfern), twelve sons and five daughters, all of whom, save one, died young thru accident) were married, raised families and lived to a good old age. That all these children grew up to maturity proves our great-grandmothers to have been good nurses in their day. At the time of her death, Mrs. Van Doren had, besides the 17 children, 129 grandchildren, 200 great grandchildren, and 6 great-great-grandchildren. She rendered good service at the spinning wheel at the age of 92. In her 95th year, from the distance of nearly six miles, she gave constant attendance upon religious worship in New Brunswick.

The Raritan, in its greatest length, including its windings, the South Branch and the Bay, may be estimated at about 80 miles. The precise date of its first settlement has never been ascertained. Gov. Dongan of New York, in a Report to the Board of Trade in England in 1687, made this statement, "I believe for these seven years last past, there have not come over into this Province twenty English, Scotch or Irish families. But on the contrary, on Long Island the people increase so fast that they complain for lack of land: and many remove from thence to a neighboring Province." He doubtless refers to New Jersey.

The early settlers of the Raritan evinced great veneration and love for the Bible, and a high regard for the privileges of the church. When our Holland ancestors left their mother country, among the first articles put up to bring with them to America was the Bible. With it came the minister and the schoolmaster. Their Bibles were very costly, and were manufactured with primary regard to durability and permanence.

Among the early settlers who came directly from Holland was the Rev. Theodore Frelinghuysen. He arrived in New York in January, 1720.... Theodore resided at Three Mile Run on a farm now owned by E. Vantine Bronzen. It was there that the "old soldier of the cross" died at the age of 57 years. He was buried in the old burying ground of the first Six Mile Run Church, now Elm Ridge Cemetery (on Lincoln Highway, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile before reaching Franklin Park, WRVL). Here his remains lie surrounded by his old neighbors and church friends - the Williamsons, Van Liew Wyckoffs, DeHarts, Vliets, Suydams, Merseholds. His body was laid on the west side of a tree, the decayed stump of which still remains (in 1873), and is the only monument to his memory- excepting a useful life spent in establishing the Reformed Dutch Church over a territory of nearly 300 square miles, now containing 50 churches of this and other congregations.

In 1740, one of the great routes of travel was from Philadelphia, via Bristol, Trenton, Princeton, Somerset Court House at Six Mile Run, and New Brunswick, to Amboy; from thence across Staten Island and the Narrows to Flatbush; thence to New York City.

In the rear of Raritan Landing, a tract was owned and early settled, probably previous to 1690, by Hendrick Vroom, one of the ancestors of the families of that name in Somerset County, and who, in 1729, in connection with Frederick Van Liew, was appointed to build a new church for the congregation of Three Mile Run.

The first schoolhouse erected in the settlement of Middlebush stood opposite the present house of John Wyckoff, and adjacent to the Indian hut before mentioned. Third stood on the present land of John C. Wyckoff and opposite the house now owned by Jeremish Voorhees at the Middlebush Road (the road that runs out Hamilton St. in New B- to Middlebush and Millstone WRVL). The fourth was on the opposite side of the road on land formerly of Frederick Van Liew, deceased. Abraham Van Nuys, of Harlingen, remembers seeing one of the "old-time" schoolhouses, covered with a thatch of straw. Doubtless, the furniture corresponded with the exterior of the building.

The early settlers located as near to water-courses as possible, and especially springs. This often led them to build at a distance from the main roads. Their buildings generally fronted the South, and if destitute of a compass, they ranged them by the North Star. Many old residences seen at the present day are thus situated.

The material of the first houses usually consisted of logs. A new comer in the place, by the aid of the older residents, would complete such a house in a few days. These log houses were succeeded by frame ones, which had one, low, single story. The ceiling was composed of the boards which constituted the upper floor, and these were laid on broad heavy beams. The apartment above served as a granary or was divided into one or more sleeping apartments for the children or for visitors. Some of the roofs extended beyond the building in front, so as to form a piazza beneath; and descending near to the ground in the rear, furnished a suitable place for weaving and other employments and sometimes for sleeping rooms. Their fire places were usually very large, without jambs, and would accommodate the whole family with seats by the fire.

When there were jambs, they were often set around with glazed tiles imported from Holland, and ornamented with various scenes, some of a scriptural character, beautiful to look upon.

The children were brought up to regular habits of industry. Almost every son was taught some mechanical art, similar to the custom of the Jews, who had a proverb that "he who was not bred to a trade was bred for the gallows."

As the English government prevented the establishment of manufactories, by heavy penalties, there existed the necessity of the colonists manufacturing woolen, linen and other similar goods in their own families. The farmers would do their own weaving, shoe-making, carpentering, etc, occupying their time in summer in out-door work on the farm, and their spare hours in winter at mechanical work in-doors. Their daughters were early made acquainted with all affairs connected with housekeeping. They would preside at the spinning wheel with as much grace and dignity as those of the present day do at the piano or organ, and take steps as gracefully and nimbly in spinning a thread at the woolen wheel as some of our modern belles do in spinning streetyarn or dancing "round dances" in the ballroom or parlor. Such industrial habits never interfered with matrimonial prospects of the young women of that day. They were considered instead as among their best recommendations. Doubtless the important question was oftentimes propounded, or "popped" and the engagement entered into accompanied by the music of the spinning wheel.

The mothers took pride in such of their daughters as excelled at the spinning wheel. The skeins of yarn they spun were hung on separate hooks, and they were increased until they formed large bunches. When company came it was customary for the mother to take them into the apartment containing the results of their daughter's industry. Pointing to the different hooks from which the bundles of yarn were suspended she would say, "That is Sarah's" - "That is Mary's", etc.

Their courtships were conducted in quite a different manner from those of the present day. Instead of many short calls they were made more seldom, and then each seemed to "mean business", making matrimonial advances at each visit. If it were known that a young lady received the visits of her "beau" as often as once a fortnight, she would be looked upon by others with about the same eye that a purchaser looks upon mortgaged property, and they would be as ready to shun her.

Young women then commenced to make early provisions for matrimonial life. But they were not, however, considered as suitable candidates for matrimony, until they could exhibit blanketing, sheeting, linen, and other suitable articles necessary to commence housekeeping, spun and prepared by their own hands. (Cupboards well-filled with sheetings, linen, etc, left by parents, were much appreciated by their heirs, in the distribution of their estates.)

Christian parents were the most inveterate enemies to all kinds of dancing and card playing, never allowing them in their houses. To engage in them their children had to steal away from home and then kept it a secret for fear of correction and parental displeasure. They were only tolerated in families of comparatively low reputation.

The sons of our ancestors were early trained to filial obedience. The fathers were noted for the exercise of parental authority, in which, however, they may have been sometimes too rigid. Both fathers and sons were also distinguished for regular and industrious habits. Such of the latter as were not put to trades demanded no pay for work performed by them while remaining with their parents where they usually continued to labor after their majority up to thirty years of age or more, and generally until they got married. In the distribution of their estates, the parents usually so arranged it by will as that one of the sons would possess the homestead; thus securing it as far as possible in the family from generation to generation. When able to possess a more convenient building, for their log house they substituted a frame one. This was constructed to contain a narrow hall or entry, as it was called, a dwelling room for the family with a bed in it to be occupied by the parents. A parlor, or carpet, was then an unheard of thing. With the main building a small kitchen was attached, and the oven for baking was located some distance from it. The floors of the house would be scoured till they appeared as white as their tables and white sand spread over them served as substitute for a carpet. As soon as their circumstances would permit, still another addition would be made to the house, resulting in quite a large and commodious building in which the parents spent the evening of their days in plenty. As circumstances required, portions of large tracts of land would be set off by fathers to their sons, improved and built upon by the latter, and again subdivided until as at present, there were many farms where previously there was but one.

The original Six Mile Run was at the Brook. The first Six Mile Run Church stood, in 1750, in the grave yard, now Elm Ridge Cemetery (on the present Lincoln Highway about three quarters of a mile north of Franklin Park WRVL, 1931). After the second church was erected on the site now occupied by the present one, that place was called Six Mile Run, changed in 1872 to Franklin Park.

Tradition states that the old Court House was used by both Somerset and Middlesex Counties. This may have been at a time antecedent to that when Middlesex first built a Court House for herself, and when she was entirely destitute of one. A part of the foundation of the old Court House is still to be seen at old Six Mile Run, opposite the House of Captain Beardsley. It is right that the error named above should be corrected so that old Six Mile Run be not further deprived of her due honor of being the first County Seat of Somerset County.

At the commencement of the present century the recreations of the young at their social gatherings in the country were various. In the evening the young men would assemble, without card or invitation, where the young ladies might have collected to quilt or to do something similar, and afterward gallant them to their several homes. Their joint amusements were of various kinds, as the singing of pleasing songs, with tunes correspondingly pleasing, the playing of games, etc. One of their most popular plays, in which they always took delight, was called "Pawn", and in this, one of the party was simply required to perform a certain act commanded. This was frequently to kiss some one of the opposite sex, which was always done with a will, and considered most agreeable. Now-a-days, (1873) it would be deemed a play inappropriate, vulgar and abandoned. Sometimes the requirements would be to "bow to the wittiest, kneel to the prettiest, and kiss the one you love best", a custom which survived longer than the other. Kissing in public by young people, in former times, was sanctioned by good authority, and what might be considered lawful example- that of the marriage ceremony of the Dutch Reformed Church, when the Dominie, the parents and all present kissed the bride, and failure by anyone would be considered a lack of proper respect. The entertainments given on marriage occasions in provisions and drink were very abundant and sumptuous, generally corresponding with the abilities of those who gave them. On the day following the wedding there was held what was called the "infare", to which the party of the first day and others, were invited. This was at the groom's residence. The entertainment would be similar to that of the previous day. Weddings were sometimes attended by those who had no invitations, and who were called "Privateers" or "volunteers". As all the friends could not well be invited, such as were not, if they came, were as welcome and kindly treated as those specially invited.

Robert Hunter, Governor of the Province of New Jersey, prior to 1720, was informed by a correspondent writing to him in England about the year 1730, that "New Brunswick had grown very rapidly, for the reason that the country back of this had improved quite fast. The farmers principally raised wheat, and the facilities of the large mills in the vicinity rendered this an important flouring mart."

On the 13th of June, 1777, the British army under command of General Howe, having had possession of New Brunswick for several months, left with two divisions, one of which he stationed at the other at Millstone, under Lord Cornwallis. Two earthen fortifications, or redoubts, were thrown up; one across the Amwell Road in Middlebush; another about 250 yards south of the first, near the railroad. (These were on the farms of Denice, and Ann, widow of Cornelius Van Llew, sons of Frederick and Helena Denise V.L. and on ground originally purchased for Frederick, by his father in 1701 - WRVL, 1931). Two other fortifications were erected on the land of J.V.C. Wyckoff of Millstone.. They have all been leveled by the ploughshare, so scarcely a trace of them remains. General Washington was lying, at the same time, with the American Army (2,000 strong- from elsewhere WRVL) at Middlebrook, along the mountain, in an elevated position in the neighborhood of Chimney Rock, (the writer's father has often pointed out the point of Neshanic Mountain above Flagtown, saying that his grandfather-Denise of Woodfern, who was in the Revolution at its end- had often told him that on a large clearing at that time, at the point of the mountain at its very top, Washington would have his army marched to a point where they could not be seen by a glass, by the British at Millstone, then run them around thru the woods and come in behind the others manouvers, thus seeking to impress the British he had many more troops than he really had. This spot is but a short distance from Rocky Hill. WRVL) taking a view of the country about New Brunswick, Middlebush, and Millstone, scanning every movement of the enemy. It was Howe's design to draw Washington and his troops into battle. Washington declined rising a battle with Howe on the plain, and Howe, not daring to attack him in his stronghold, returned with his two divisions to New Brunswick on the 19th, and on the 22nd evacuated the place and moved with all his army to Staten Island. On their march thither they were attacked in the rear by a part of Washington's troops, who had come down from the mountain to annoy them, in which attempt the Americans were unsuccessful. After several skirmishes with the enemy, the latter returned to their former stronghold. These skirmishes account for the battles of Quibbletown, Westfield, Scotch Plains, etc. of which we used to hear our fathers speak so frequently at their fireside conversations in our youthful days. During the occurrences described, General Washington was a part of the time standing on a rock, on the mountain in the vicinity of Plainfield, viewing the manouvers of the two armies on the Plains below within the circle of their operations. While the two grand contending armies were lying in an hostile attitude, and in full view of each other, Howe's on the south side of the Raritan at Middlebush and Millstone, and Washington's on the north side along the mountain, the American Congress adopted the stars and stripes as the flag of the Union. The first flag was prepared by the hands of a lady of Philadelphia and was unfurled in August following, at the siege of Fort Schuyler.

After the battle of Princeton, two of the British regiments, while at Kingston took a road in their march leading to the left, and encamped for several days at Middlebush, on the ground which General De Heister occupied six months afterwards. When General De Heister's army left Middlebush, tradition states that they attempted to burn every building between that place and New Brunswick. Some of the fires were put out and some buildings failed to take fire. The following important property was burnt or destroyed; Garret Voorhees (follows an itemized list); Peter Repelyes (follows a list); John Spader (follows a list); Hendrick Bergen (follows a list); Johannes van Liew, near New Brunswick: six horses, one house burnt and outhouses and barns etc., 519 pounds, 16 shillings and 5 pence.

There are now (in 1875) residing in one family in Franklin Township, three persons, who were living and beheld General Washington previous to his death. Henry V. De Mott, when a youth, saw the General accompanied by an escort, enter New Brunswick on his way to New York. His wife and her sister, Elizabeth Van Liew (Note: this is "Aunt Betsy" Van Liew whose Diary was published in the Somerset County Quarterly, now to be seen at the N.J. Hist. Soc. H'd'q'rts in Newark. WRVL) at school at Three-Mile -Run saw him either on that or a similar occasion. The latter says that at the school the scholars were arranged in order at the road-side by the teacher, as the General approached seated in his carriage. He halted, uncovered his head, waved his hat, smiled and spoke kindly and pleasantly to the children. Lady Washington was sitting by his side and evidently took pleasure in the somewhat singular interview.

Before the era of railroads, traveling between New York and Philadelphia increased to such an extent that 32 stages were frequently run each way per day to carry passengers. The drivers changed horses at Kingston. On days of extraordinary travel the farmers in the neighborhood were in readiness to furnish additional vehicles and teams if circumstances required them. In 1825, when General de Lafayette passed thru the state to review the troops assembled at Trenton to do him honor, there were 168 horses ready harnessed and exchanged at Kingston. The General passed thru New Brunswick in a splendid barouche drawn by six grey horses, with his head uncovered, accompanied by the Mayor, and other dignitaries seated beside him. The stages on their way to New York would often separate a short distance east of Kingston, some taking the Trenton Turnpike, others crossing Rocky Hill to New Brunswick by the way of Six-Mile-Run. Tradition says that at one time 30 stages halted at Ayer's Tavern on the Turnpike five miles above New Brunswick and at Baker's opposite to it on the old road, 20 stages at the same time.

The early settlers along the Raritan were invariably distinguished for their industrious habits, adopting the Bible (and Dr. Franklin's) rule: "The sun riseth and man goeth forth to work and to his labor until the evening." There was no difference in opinion as to what constituted a day's labor in regard to time. The laboring man who came to work for his employer after sun-rise was sure to make an apology for his late arrival. "From sun to sun" was the time for labor, except for mechanics in Fall and Winter, when they worked (if indoors) from sunrise till 9 o'clock at night. The latter was the standing rule for journey-men and apprentices. Mechanics who worked at a job five or ten miles away would still get there at sunrise on Monday morning.

Judge Ralph Voorhees, in his article in the "New Brunswick Daily Fredonian" of April 29, 1875, (see page 187) states that this Frederick Van Liew married a. Hendricksen and refers to his son and grandson as having succeeded him on the Homestead, and as living at Middlebush. Elsewhere, Judge Voorhees states that this son Frederick lived and died at the Homestead at Three Mile Run.

Judge Voorhees has confused Frederick 3F5 with his cousin Frederick 3H4, who married a "Cathline" and who in turn was the "....Hendricksen" mentioned above, and the mother of Roelof. See page 83.

None of the Church records of that part of the country indicate that Frederick 3F5 was married or had ever any children baptised.

He is buried at Three Mile Run, along side of his father and his grave is marked with a fieldstone marker on which the initials

FL are cut.

We assume, as no wife or children are interred along side of Frederick 3F5, that he was, in the light of all the above, unmarried and left no descendants.

3F7 Cornelius VAN LIEW m, at Three Mile Run, Ann (Antje) Boeman
(Bouman, Bowman)

Cornelius' lands were of about 350 acres, and were the Millstone end of lot #3 of the Harrison Tract. They extended from the Millstone River, half a mile wide, up the south side of the Amwell Road to about half way to Middlebush. Here they met other VanLiew lands that extended from his boundary to Middlebush Church, (the other half of that part of lot#3 that ran from Middlebush to the Milstone.

Cornelius lived at what is now East Millstone, the Church and the village having been built on his lands.

When Lord Howe sent Cornwallis and De Heister, with two divisions, to advance against Washington, then on Shannock (Neshanic) Mountain, with Headquarters at Rocky Hill, Cornwallis went as far as the Millstone River. Here he encamped on Cornelius' lands, and put up forts thereon. See Item C, page 176.

Beyond the baptismal records of Cornelius' children, the Author has been unable to trace any ensuing descendants.

Re: Johanis 4F20 - under "WILLS" it will be noted there was a John van Liew whose Will was probated in April 1819 in Middlesex County. This could not have been the Will of Johannes L. 4F25 who died in JUNE 1819. It must therefore be that of Johanis 4F20 above. The Will leaves all his property to Ann Van Liew (Spelled van Low).

It has not been possible to find any trace of the descendants of Johannes 4F25. Judge Voorhees, in discussing the sons of Johannes (3F8) states that John lived at Bound Brook. This, and the fact that he was in the Revolutionary War is all the information we have. The cemetery at Bound Brook yields nothing. Of course, his children, if any, may all have been daughters.

Son John Van Lewe

Johannes Van Lewe and Dorothy Lott were married on the 16th day of June, 1759. Their children were as follows:

Their son Frederick was born July 12, 1760.

Their son Denice was born April 25, 1764 (of Woodfern).

Their daughter Ann was born July 29, 1769.

Their son Hendrick was born May 25, 1776.

Their son Cornelius S. was born December 26, 1778.

Their deaths occurred as follows:

Henrick Van Lewe died January 3, 1779.

Cornelius Van Lewe died February 16, 1815.

John Van Lewe died June 23, 1819.

Frederick Van Lewe died June 30, 1820

Denice Van Lewe died July 10, 1857

Anne Van Lewe died November 18, 1848 (October 27, 1847)

Matilda Van Liew, daughter of Frederick and Ann Rappelyea born October 9, 1783, died January 18, 1851.

Dorothy Van Liew, their daughter, born November 10, 1787, died November 17, 1832.

John R. Van Liew, born December 17, 1791, died May 8, 1838.

Ann Van Liew, their daughter, born March 15, 1795, died May 15, 1870.

The wedding ring of Jeronimus Rappelyea and Matilda Petersen is now in the possession of Mrs. Bogart, and the inscription on it is as follows: "Amor tandem vixit." MP & JR. It is a very narrow ring with two hands clasped.

Letter found among Mrs. Clark's data (WRVL).

My dear Cousin:

I received your note asking my full name which I hasten to inform you is simply "Sarah M. Bogart", a plain, homely, honest, old fashioned name, above reproach in the past, and which I hope to maintain in its integrity as long as I am known.

How glad I am that you made your run out to New Brunswick while it was so pleasant - the peep I had of it lingers with me, and will until I see you again. You look so well that I hope you may try it again before long. And now I want to tell you of a pilgrimage I made last week on a fair afternoon to the "Three Mile Run" cemetery where our Van Liew ancestry are sleeping the years away - Cousin Sadie Clark and granddaughter Anna together with myself made the party and there we three representatives of three generations stood by the graves of our great, and great great and great great great grandparents. There lay our grandfather Frederick Van Liew and his sainted widow, whom you and I remember well, and there also is the grave of our much loved Aunt Dorothy Traphagen (your dear wife's mother) and poor Fred. Trap. and others of whom perhaps you have never heard. There also we found the graves of Jehames Van Liew our great grandfather and his wife, Dorothy Lott. He died the 10th of Oct. 1794, just one hundred years ago, and his wife in March 1813. They were the parents of grandpa Van Liew whose grave is just by theirs. Was it not remarkable that after the lapse of a century that three of their descendants should revisit their resting place, and acknowledge our veneration and respect for their many sterling qualities, which I at least know they possessed. I assure you my Dutch blood was all stirred up with honest pride.

I hope I have not tired you with this tale, but hope you may feel sufficiently interested to enjoy hearing it. I thought of you and wished you were with us, for we elderly people realize more fully than the young the value of our ancestry. And now dear cousin, I must say goodbye. May our loving Father continue His care and protection over you and bring you, and all of us who are left, in safety and peace to the end of our journey here below.

Yours affectionately,

Sarah Bogart

New Brunswick,
November 8, 1894

Her daughter is Mrs. William H. Waldron of New B- who has the Bible of Frederick and Helena De Nyse and later of Johannes and Dorothy Lott(WRVL 1931).

This Bible is now in the possession of Willard Randolph van Liew, Jr. (8F291 It is in a magnificent state of preservation (ERVL 1955).

Item B WILL OF JOHANNES VAN LAWEN (3F8)

Inventory 4193 pounds - 9 shilling - 0 pence.

His wife was to have the two Easterly rooms.

Gave his son Frederick all his (Johannes') land or plantation where Frederick (son) then lived, containing 183 acres (for location see #4 on Voorhees' map of the Amwell Road).

Gave his daughter, Antje, 180 acres to be taken from the Homestead Farm, beginning in the middle of his farm along Post Road and running N.E. along said Post Road toward Brunswick and to the rear of the Raritan Lots.

Each of his five children got 750 pounds.

Re: Johannes van Liew (Lawen)(3F8).

It is reasonably evident that Frederick, eldest brother of Johannes, was not a married man and lived at home when he died at the age of 31 years.

In the meantime, Johannes' two older brothers, Cornelius and Denice, had married and had been provided with lands by their father, the former at Millstone, the latter at Middlebush.

Johannes, but 22 years old when his oldest brother Frederick died, remained at home with his mother Helena, a widow, his father having died when Johannes was 20 years old. Three years after his father's death and one year after that of his oldest brother, when he was 23 years old, Johannes married Dorothy Lott of Long Island.

The habits, the customs, the pleasures, the lives led by Johannes and Dorothy Lott, must have been as described elsewhere, as related by Judge Ralph Voorhees.

Seventeen years after the marriage of Johannes and Dorothy Lott, the Revolutionary War broke out. His mother Helena, who evidently lived on the Homestead also, was to live to the close of the War in 1784. Four of Johannes' children had been born when the War broke out, Hendrick was born the year Independence was declared, and Cornelius S, two years after the outbreak of the War.

The oldest son, Frederick, was 16 years old when the War started, Johannes Lott 14 years old, and Denyse 12. All three of these sons were in the war before it closed. Hendrick died at the age of three, and Cornelius S. was but six years old when the War closed.

The location of the Homestead was particularly unfortunate for Helena, and for Johannes, when the war started. Less than three miles from the British positions in New Brunswick, Johannes' family suffered severely from the depredations of the soldiers, particularly of the Hessians. Their cattle was taken, boards from the floors of their house and their barns were ripped up to make a bridge for the British to cross the Raritan, bread and food were time and again taken from their oven and off their table, and when Cornwallis and De Heister, and the latter's Hessians retreated from the Millstone and from Middlebush to New Brunswick, the attempt was made to burn everything along the route of retreat, and during this retreat a house of Johannes' - presumably the Homestead - and barns were burned, and cattle driven off.

Of all those who suffered losses, Johannes' were the heaviest.

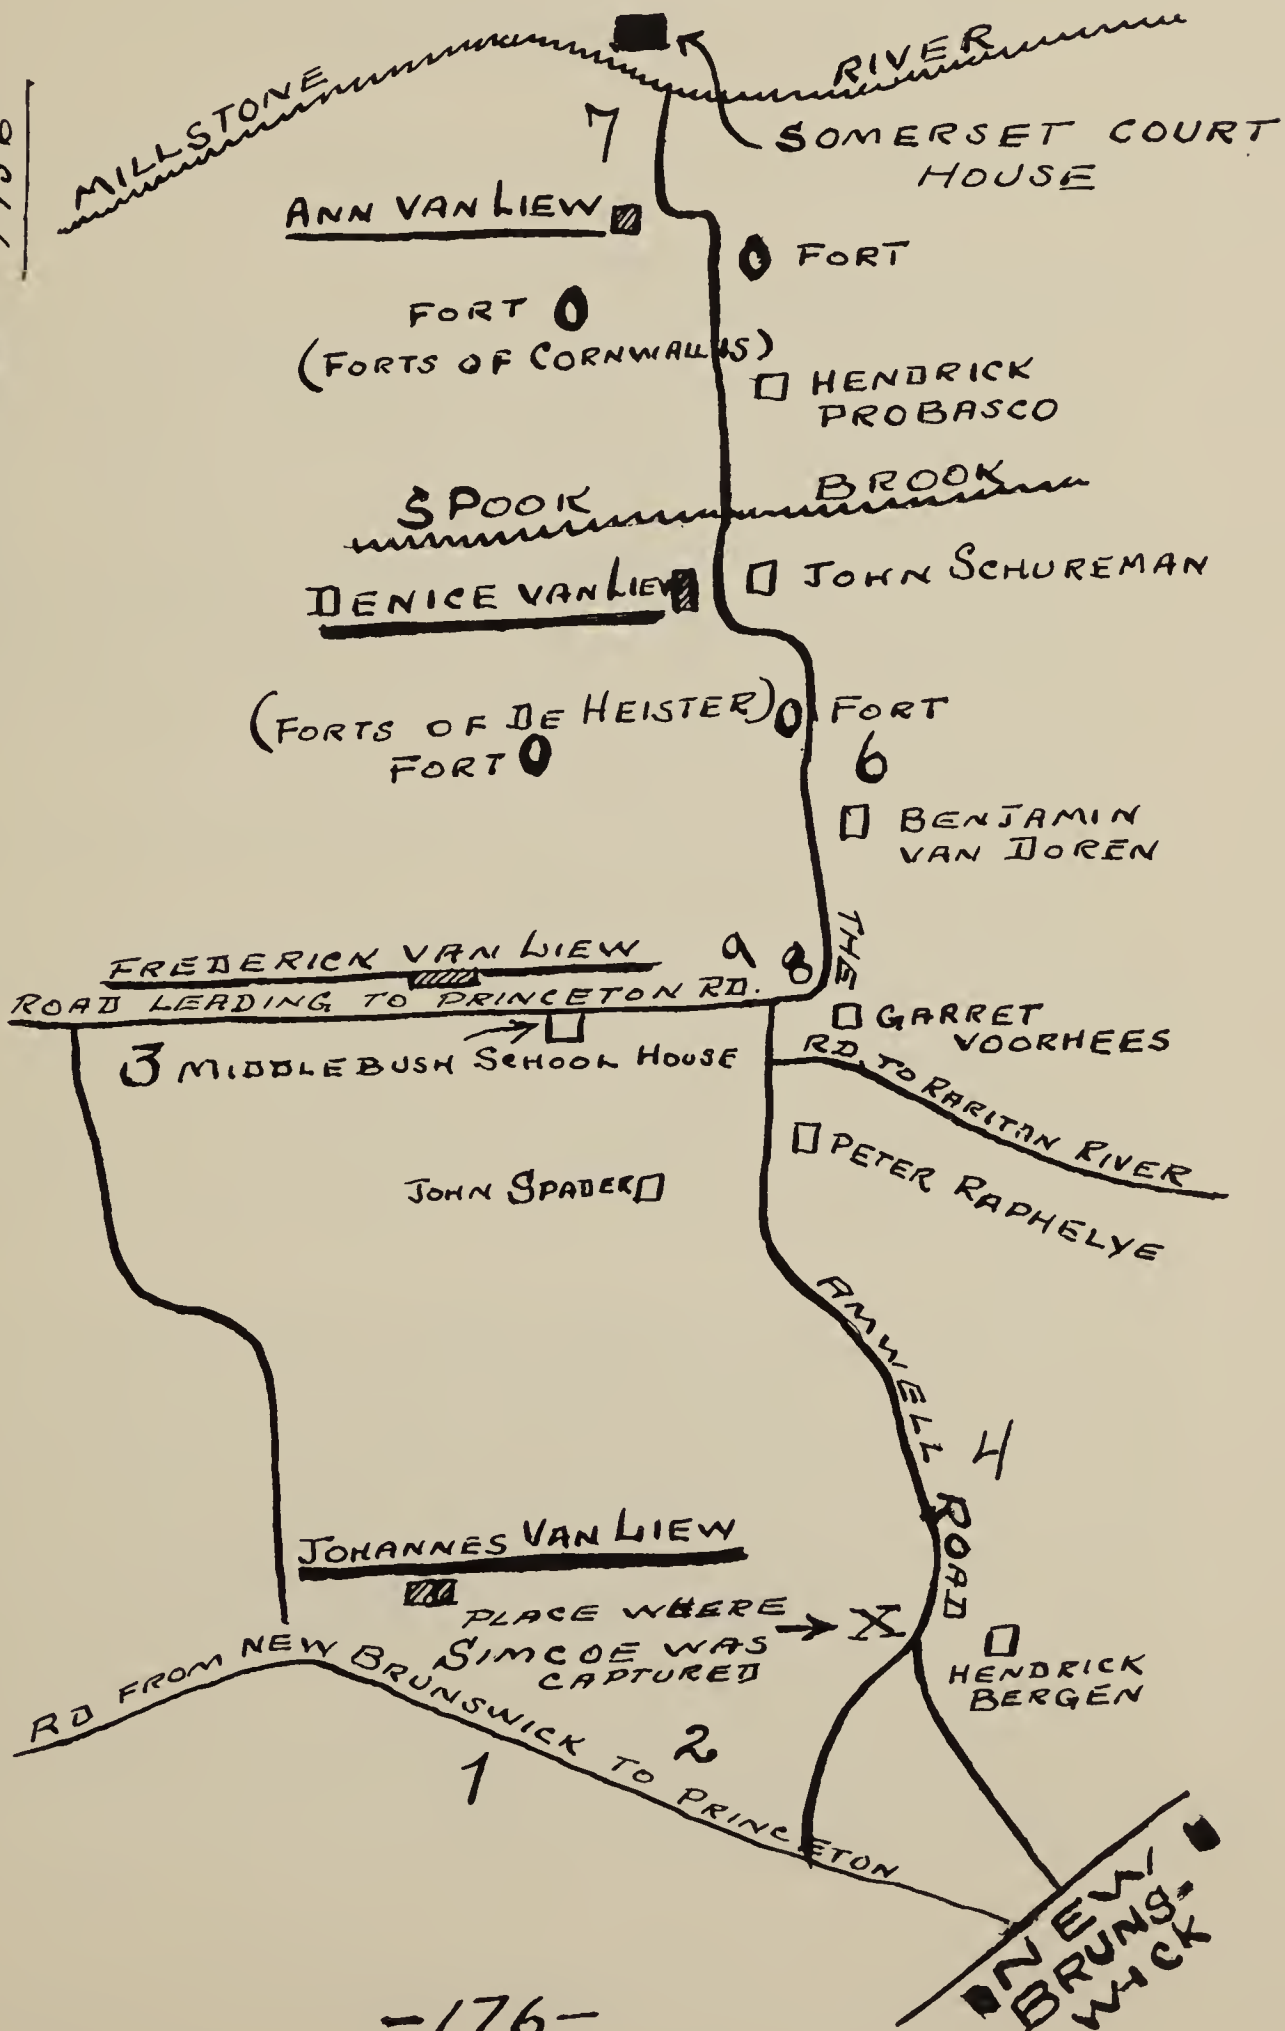

Johannes inherited his father's old Dutch Bible, brought from Holland, printed in 1717. His oldest son Frederick next inherited it, then his daughter Matilda next possessed it, she giving it to her daughter Sarah Disborough Bogard and after the death of her daughter Anna - Mrs. William H. Waldron of New Brunswick, it came into the possession of the Author. The inscriptions in this Bible are given on page 172

Map of the Amwell Road in 1776

Numerals have been put on map by W. R. van Liew.

1. Three Mile Run Cemetery.
2. Voorhees Railway Station.
3. "Middle Road" end of #1 "Lot" of the Harrison Tract, while Johannes van Liew and Voorhees station are the Indian Path, now Lincoln Highway end of #1 "Lot" of the Harrison Tract, at "3" was located House and Barns of Denice (3F6), second son of Frederick and Helena Denyse, later becoming the Drew Farm and in 1931 known as the Kline Farm.
4. The home, later than 1776, of Frederick Van Liew (4F24) and Ann Rappelyea, located 1.8 miles from Middlebush Church. Home stood opposite a woods; behind a hedge in 1931 stand three modern houses, the foundations of Frederick's and Ann's home, burnt a few years ago, still exist there.
5. South Middlebush Cemetery, used as a place of internment by families of Denice (3F6) and by his first cousin Frederick (3H4), who lived almost opposite to Denice.
6. Cedar Grove Cemetery, used by Cornelius Van Liew (3F7).
7. Ann Boeman Van Liew was the wife of Cornelius (3F7), who was alive in 1776, when Symco's Raid occurred.
8. Middlebush Church.
9. Middle Road - that cuts the Township in two.

In 1776, the four Van Liew properties, extending from the present Lincoln Highway to the Millstone River, were those of the three brothers, Denice, Cornelius and Johannes, all sons of Frederick and Helena Denyse, and, of their first cousin, Frederick, the only son of Hendrick (2H1) and Gertjie Cortelyou.

When he drew this map, Judge Voorhees was 80 years old and he was locating properties on it owned 100 years previously. Judge Voorhees is mistaken in placing "Denice Van Liew's" property on the map, as opposite to that of John Schureman's. The Judge, in so doing, contradicts his article of a year previous in the New Brunswick Fredonian of Thursday, April 29, 1875, where he says, Cornelius' land extended from the Millstone River to about half way to Middlebush to where it joined that of Frederick's (whom he called Cornelius' brother. He was not Cornelius' brother, but his first cousin). Further proof that Denice (3F6) did not live where indicated by the Judge on the map, lies in the fact that Denice (3F6) and his family did not use the Cedar Grove Cemetery as he would have been likely to have done if he had lived almost opposite it as indicated by the Judge, whereas Denice (3F6) used the South Middlebush Cemetery which is a short distance down the road from where Denice (3F6) lived. In 1776, there was no other Denice but Denice (3F6), old enough to be married.

LETTER FROM ELIZABETH VAN LIEW (5F35) ("AUNT BETSY") TO HER NIECE, ELIZABETH DEMOTT GARRETSON.

(Through the courtesy of Mr. John J. DeMott (8A) who caused Aunt Betsy's Journal to be published in the Somerset County Quarterly.)

Elizabeth Van Liew was the maiden sister of Ida VanLiew DeMott, wife of Henry Vroom DeMott.

Elizabeth DeMott Garretson was the daughter of Henry Vroom and Ida Van Liew DeMott. At the time this letter was written, Elizabeth DeMott Garretson, was a young widow, having lost her husband, Garret Garretson in 1844, and also having lost two of her three children. In 1846 she was probably living with her parents and had her one surviving child, Eleanor Augusta, with her - then six years old.

In the letter, there is a special word of remembrance to Eleanor Augusta. The latter married (1) Abram A. Suydam, and (2) John Van Dyke Pumyea, and was the mother of Ida Pumyea Eggie.

This letter is dated from Lysander, Onondaga County, New York, whither Elizabeth Van Liew had gone to visit her brother Frederick Van Liew and family. Frederick and his wife Anges Pumyea Van Liew had left Three Mile Run, N. J., in 1832, along with many other farmers who settled in "the Lake Country" of central New York. Frederick and Agnes had six children, the first four of whom were born in New Jersey and the other two at Lysander. The two oldest children were the boys — then aged 26 and 24 — named Cornelius and John — who were then driving 300 sheep from Lysander to New Jersey.

The central New York settlers for years kept in touch with their New Jersey relatives. This letter, while addressed by Aunt Betsy to her niece, was actually a general report to the family. It was folded and sealed, without envelope. It is marked as being from "Plainville, N. Y., Sept. 11th 1846." It is addressed "Mrs. Elizabeth Garretson New Brunswick New Jersey Care H.V. DeMott." Plainville is about four miles south of Lysander, both places being some 25 miles north-west of Syracuse.

In addition to Aunt Betsy's account of her trip and the doings at Lysander, there are two additional paragraphs written by "Agnes Van Liew," i.e.- Aunt Betsy's sister-in-law, wife of Frederick.

It is not clear whether Aunt Betsy made the trip alone or whether someone was with her for the entire distance.

Original letter in possession of Ida Pumyea Eggie.
Copied June, 1952.

Lysander 10th September 1846

Dear friends

It is with pleasure that I sit down to fulfil my promise in writing to you to inform you of our pleasant journey & safe Arrival to this place I Did not think when leaving your house that I should have resolution enough to prosecute the journey with so short Notice But on perusing the paper they concluded it would suit Best to go to York in the morning which made the time still shorter so we went right to packing up & was at the Boat half an hour Before she started & they took on so many peaches that I Began to think they might sink the Boat and then came the horses But finally they Appeared to Imagine they had a full load and went off Leaving 1 doz horses standing on the Dock but they stopped often and took on A great many peaches & passengers Before they got through there were Several Neighbours & acquaintances on the Boat so we got some information about the friends & Neighbours however We got safe into York

I staid on the Boat till Cornelius Went and put our Baggage on Board A North River Boat Named Henry Hudson then we went up to 21st Street & found the friends all well and had a pleasant Visit took Dinner and tea with them then came Down to the Boat found it well stored with passengers started 7 Oclock had excellent accomodations we only stopped once that was at poughkeepsie I never rested A Night so well on the North River It was a very Long Boat And the Wheel was so far off that I think we could Not hear it and it run So steady that we could scarcely feel A Motion.

We got into Albany Before Light But there was No Bustle made to hurry us off the Boat we Laid till it was Light Dresst very Deliberately at 7 took the carrs And In A short time I Do not recollect the hour we were put on Board the packet which Lay in Readiness and went off well Loaded with passengers among the rest Were Mrs Nelly Smith & Cit Rappleyea one of the hands took my Basket and I followed him to the Back end of the cabin & as I was Laying my things together some voice appeared to address me hant you Lost It was Mrs R I cast up my eye and Did Not realize her Her Vail partly covering her face & she looked Very fine I answered very politely No mam, then casting A Look around spied Nelly she looked Natural and I was very glad to find Old acquaintance among so many strangers they staid on the Boat till Near Night they had staid the Night Before At Isaac Wicoff's in Albany they were going to visit their Sister Sarah she lived some Distance from the canal and where they Left the Boat there only A few Buildings and A very Large Store so the Captain told them that was the place I felt Bad to see them get off Alone in such A strange place I went up on Deck with them when they got off they walked slowly in the middle of the street Looking this way and that way at Length A Gentleman started and went up to them and they shook hands very Affectionately then I felt satisfied

I did not feel Loansome for the passengers were sociable and there Was A Mr. and Mrs Robins from flemington that came all the way through with us and she appeared to feel almost Like Relations we changed Boats at Utica But we scarcely knew it we only stepped off on the other the Boat came along Side and most of the Baggage was handed through the windows out of the cabin it was just getting into A clean room and having fresh supplies then we went till we came to Syracuse where they change again Which was thursday Night 9 O'clock we got on a Line Boat for fear of being Landed in the Night Accordingly we went to Bed and were called up just as it was getting Light Peru has improved Very much We were taken into a Very pleasant Room the Landlord took us out in A Spring Waggon he had to feed his horses first But we got up there I think friday morning Between 7 and 8 a clock Very unexpected and had the pleasure of finding our friends well, they all came to the waggan that were home the Boys had started on thursday the 27th of August with upwards of 300 sheep for New Jersey they wrote when they had Been gone A week then they were upwards of 60 miles and then they were well and No Bad Luck

the friends and Neighbors Look all very Natural only A Little older some of them they had two carpenters when we came here they are Building two Bed rooms and A Buttery Back which will be a great Improvement But the carpenters went off the same Night we came there & the Mason George Bratt came yesterday morning to work the word soon circulated that some Jersey folks had come in they thought it was Aunt Betsey or her image Maria Van Der veer came over friday afternoon on Sunday went to church and heard Mr Night preach in the afternoon Mr Scott made A visit here & on monday morning Uncle Frederick took Cornelious down to Jordon to go on to Rochester to his Aunts Where he expects to stay till Next week we could not tell when we will start for home till he returns then he will write home And tell when we will start I have My things in his trunk I think we will start Soon after the 20th there will Be no Need of all watching the Boat for it will be uncertain when we will get in

I have enjoyed good health since I Left home and I hope you have all enjoyed the same Blessing I thought very much about home till I got within A days Journey of this place then I Began to Leave off thinking about things behind and pressed with eagerness to meet my friends

On monday afternoon we went to Mr Vanderveers Mrs VDveer is not very well Tuesday Mrs Scott and Mrs Bratt were here wensday Mr and Mrs Beard & Mr and Mrs Van Middlesworth spent the afternoon here to Day is thursday & Agnes & myself have Been visiting this afternoon to Mr Conovers they were all tolerable well But Caty Ann & she appears to be in the Last Stage of consumption She Requested that I should come as soon as possible While she was able to talk & I think it was with great Difficulty that she Did talk things look well in this country the corn appears to be perfectly ripe they were cutting up their corn when we came in from the canal there are plenty of apples and very fine ones the clover and grass stands like a meadow & Aunt Agnes is making cheese & I am Learning the..... Jane has made A Large one this week And Now there is Another Large one in the press that I have made with the help of Jane and Aunt Agnes uncle frederick is helping the Mason putting on sealing Lath the Little girls have grown very much and they look very promising It is quite a Disappointment Not to see the Boys But I hope we will have the pleasure to see them in Jersey If we are spared to get there tomorrow we have promised to visit Mrs Scott plainville this wisiting takes so much of our good time that I shall be for giving it up before I can go around, the weather has Been very warm But pleasant since we started we have had Very Little rain since we started monday afternoon was very warm But tuesday It changed a little and appears almost cold enough for frost I expect you are all with one accord fixing up the church I hope they will all unite & Be in their right minds and not every one Differing in their Opinions remember me to all that enquire after me I miss Mariah E very mutch remember me to your father & mother sisters and Brothers to Eleanor Augusta to Joseph & mary good Night

friday morning We are all well the weather is fine and this Goes to the office to Day No more at present But my love to you Dont work too hard Leave something for me to Mrs E Garretson

(The following two notes appear on the back of the above letter written by Agnes Van Liew, wife of Frederick, of Lysander)

My dear friends

Betsey has given me an invitation to write a few lines and now Before we start visiting I will just say a few words too invite you to pursue the Same course that she has come right along when you happen to think of it no matter how you find us wether we have a chair or not to sit on Betsey found about as great a looking house as ever She Seen I shall not undertake to describe it to you She can tell you when she gets home and that will not be long I expect as Betsey thinks she cannot stay the Winter I have not much to say nor much Space to Say it on I shall close by Sending my love to you all

Agnes Vanliew

Eliza

You used to be a good hand to coax any one to go out you.....
Father and Mother if you feel able to take a tour out here but Betsey say you do not feel very well at present but I hope you may soon enjoy good health for it is a Blessing we cannot too highly prize I shall close once more for you cannot read this

Good Morning

Upon further reading it becomes clear that Aunt Betsey made the trip to Lysander in company with a "Cornelius". This could have been her older brother Cornelius, then living at Neshanic. More probably it was one of her several nephews named Cornelius. The fact that she says Cornelius continued the journey to Rochester to visit "his Aunt", makes this almost certain. There was no question about Aunt Betsey herself traveling beyond Lysander.

Elizabeth DeMott Garretson, to whom the letter was addressed, died at her father's home, at Middlebush, on June 4, 1847. She was known in the family as "Eliza" and her aunt thus addresses her in one of the notes.

The first stage of the trip was by steamboat from New Brunswick to New York. This could have been made by train, as the railroad from New Brunswick to New York was opened about 1832. But the boat was chosen, departing from the Steamboat Dock.

It was in early September, when the peach crop was moving to the New York market. The owners of the peaches would travel on the boat and when the latter touched the dock in New York there would be fast and furious dickering as the buyers came on board and made their bids for the various lots.

The reference to horses on the boat to New York is not clear. Quite likely, these were horses collected and driven as far as New Brunswick, destined for the New York market. Then they may have been loaded on the steamboat for the final stage of the trip.

It is not known who the "friends" were who lived on Twentyfirst Street, New York.

It is interesting that as far back as 1846 the Hudson River night boats made the trip to Albany in such fast time.

After the transfer at Albany, the journey westward to Lysander was via the Erie Canal.

Item F:

On September 19, 1829, Dennis F. van Liew (5F38) deeded a horse to his nephew Dennis F. (6F95) son of his brother Frederick F. (5F39).

THE DEED:

Dennis F. to Frederick and Maria

The place I live in at this time New Brunswick, I say it is in rhyme
The horse I lent you he was brown I do him give unto your son.

When twenty one he shall him have before that time he'll be yours self,
'Tis for his name I do him give a horse to ride if he does live.

Dennis van Liew and Junior too, that is the name of this your son -
Of name the same, and Senior too the gift I give is for him I own.

'Tis Middlebush and there he dwells, performs the work his father tells
A youth of ten which now he is the place he dwells our Father's too.

The horse is five and yet alive, you must him keep and make him thrive,
'Tis Middlesex, that is his name;- you must him work, that makes him tame.

But if your son now does not live 'tis to the next I do him give,
September eighteen twenty nine which was the year I did this sign.

But you must to me unto lend, and when I want I'll for him send;
If I should die your Son may live this DEED you must unto him give.

'Tis to his friend he must prove true, faithful, honest, and justice due-
His parents reverence, fear and love, and learn to fear the Lord above.

His brother and his sisters too, he must be kind and love them true,
His Bible he must study well that he may in all things excell.

His aunt he must now n'eer forget because from her the gift is sent.
He must pray to have his sins forgiven that when he dies he may go to Heaven.

Item G:

Capt. John van Liew (5F46) Left Middlebush, New Jersey for Chicago, Ill. and settled later in Perry Township, Richmond Co., Ohio. According to tradition, he was a flashy talker, enterprising, - though visionary and at times eccentric.

He went West so that his children might expand and prophesied they would live to see people fly through the air and also have free communication through the world.

Item H:

The funeral of the Reverend John van Liew DD was recorded in print in a 52 page booklet. This includes the proceedings, the discourses and the prayers. In his discourse, the Reverend Henry P. Thompson stated: "So that probably not less than six hundred souls were added to the church through his instrumentality. Now when we remember that twenty years is the average limit of ministerial service; and that one hundred is the average number of conversions under one man's ministry, have we not great reason to thank God for a life like this? God has honored him as He honors few men in any generation."

The Rev. JvL DD was minister of the Readington Church N. J. for 43 years. For further details concerning his remarkable life and his approach to his objectives as a servant of Christ, see Manual of the REFORMED CHURCH in America, 4th Edition, p 833.

And what about the wife who backed this dedicated servant of the Lord? A descendant of Dr. Hezekiah Stites Woodruff (volunteer surgeon in Washington's army) and Mary Blatchley.

She was a society girl living in Washington Square, N.Y.C. Her family feared she would not be happy living in a small village where her husband accepted a call to minister to a large congregation who came to Church from miles around, many traveling long distances each Sunday to hear him preach. (JvL had chosen this country church - and air - undoubtedly because of the delicate condition of his health.) She proved to be an excellent mate to this man, always the gracious hostess at weddings and other functions that took so much of the energy and time of the ministers' wives of the day.

Item J:

Among the memorabilia in my possession, is a copy of a letter written by D. F. Van Liew from Aurora, Illinois, and dated November 27, 1895.

It is addressed to Leonard D. Van Liew Esq., of Detroit, Michigan. It is on the letterhead of the Inventors' Association of the state of Illinois, and the writer is listed as the Treasurer.

The writer is identified as Dennis F. VL (6F95) because he mentions Frederick F. VL as the name of both his father and his grandfather (of Somerset Co.). He likewise mentions his mother as Voorhees and his grandmother as Van Dyke.

He likewise mentions his son, W. D. VL of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and regrets not having made memo of the different branches of the family when he heard his grandparents talk about them.

I identify Leonard D. VL as (7J127). I have made every effort to reach possible descendants of these men, but with no success. This letter is therefore, mentioned as a clue to their descendants, should any of them run across it in years to come. ERvan L - 1956.

ITEM K -

As shown elsewhere in this book our family has fought in every war in which this country has been engaged. Johannes (2J1) - Hendrick (2H1) and Frederick (2F1) started by serving in the Colonial wars.

If it were possible to compile a record of all those who had served, the result would be a sizeable and interesting volume in its own right. Unfortunately your Co-Author has not the time for this enterprise, and has therefore elected to record the service of one man thereby honoring all the others who have fought and given their lives for the freedom Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen sought when in 1670 he landed on the shores of Long Island.

Captain Robert Benjamin Chapman (son of Agnes Van Liew - 8F270) gave his life during WW2 trying to save that of his Col. Clifford.

Among other decorations, he was awarded the Silver Star and the Bronze Star Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, --

For gallantry in action - Bronze Star Medal with V device - Purple Heart with one Oak Leaf Cluster -

In addition - posthumously - awarded the Purple Heart for supreme sacrifice in defense of his Country. Also the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with one Bronze Arrowhead and four Bronze service stars. Also WW2 Victory Medal, - Combat Infantryman Badge - Distinguished Unit Emblem - Expert Badge with Pistol and Machine Gun bars - Sharpshooter Badge with Rifle and Automatic Rifle Bars - and the Philippine Liberation Ribbon with three Bronze Service Stars.

THE VAN LIEW FAMILY

From the New Brunswick Weekly Fredonian, Thursday,

April 29th, 1875

By Judge Ralph Voorhees

It may be interesting to many of the descendants of the first settlers along the old Indian Path to acquire something of their history which has been collected from various sources - From ancient records, preserved and found at the Van Liew homestead. We have the following names and dates: Frederick Van Liew, son of Frederick Hendrickson, the emigrant; died Nov. 27th, 1756. Helena Denice, his wife, died March 6th, 1784, aged 84 years. Their children were: Dinah, born 1718; married ----- Vegten; died Nov. 22nd, 1760. Helena, born October 15th, 1724; married Rem. Ditmars of Millstone; died July 6th, 1778. Maria, born March 17th, 1724; married ----- Duryee Oct. 26th, 1761. Frederick, born Feb. 5th, 1727; married ----- Hendrickson; (This is Cathleen Hendrickson, 2nd wife of Frederick 3H4, see page 81 paragraphs 4 and 5. E.R. vL 1955) was succeeded by his son Frederick, grand-son Frederick, and he by P. S. Brokaw on the homestead. His land extended from the Middlebush road to about half way to Millstone. On the Eastern corner the Middlebush Church was built in 1834. He died May 25th, 1758. Nice or Denice born Jan. 7th 1734; married Ida, widow of Jacob Wyckoff of * Three Mile Run; died Oct. 17, 1777. She was a daughter of John Stryker of * Six Mile Run; died Oct. Cornelius born April 16th, 1736; married Ann Van Liewen, lived at Millstone where the Tavern at the Canal Bridge has been kept for about forty years. East Millstone is built on the western part of his land. It extended eastwardly on the south side of the Amswell Road to where it joined the land of his brother Frederick of Middlebush. On the other Homestead he was succeeded by Henry Disborough, then by Henry's son, John Disborough, then by John Wyckoff, Senior, and is now owned by his son, John V. C. Wyckoff. Cornelius and his wife were members of the Reformed Church of Millstone in 1775. He died 1777 (Jan. 29th). East Millstone is built on the western corner of his land. Johannes born April 26th, 1736, lived on the homestead. Married Dorothy Lott. He died Oct. 10th, 1794. She died Oct. 9th, 1813. The date of their father's settlement at Three Mile Run, on Lot No. 1 of the Harrison tract, is not definitely known. He married Helena Denice 1715. He was the largest land and stock owner in the Township of Franklin. In 1745 he was assessed for eight hundred acres of land, forty cattle, and thirty-five sheep amounting to 1^l 15s 6d. He was an active and influential member in the church of Three Mile Run, which appears to have been organized as early as 1703. In 1729, he and Frederick Vroom, who lived a little north of the Raritan Landing, were appointed a committee in case the new minister, expected to arrive from Holland, should come, and the old church not be fit for service. Then they were to build a new one, to be placed "On the land of Johannes Pettinger of thereabouts." The old church stood at the graveyard when it was taken down and how long it remained there is not known, nor that another was ever built.

The Van Liew families furnished the church with some of its most pious, active and influential members and strongest pillars. Frederick Van Liew of Middlebush was a great grandson of Frederick the second. He married Maria, a daughter of Peter Voorhees who survives him and is living with her daughter, Eliza Mc Kracken at Batavia, Illinois. He was a man of great faith and prayer, and died in 1835 or 6. A few years previous to his death, he had a foreigner in his employ by the name of McFarland, who afterwards proved to be a bad and dangerous man. One day, deeming himself insulted by some one of the family, he became very angry and was, unknowingly, overheard by the servant girl to say that he would be avenged by burning the buildings that night. She told Mr. Van Liew what she had heard. He assembled his family as usual for evening prayers, committed his family and buildings to the protection of Him who neither slumbers nor sleeps, and slept as usual without apprehension of evil, confiding in the promise "Thou Shalt not be afraid of the terror by night, neither shall any evil come nigh thy dwelling." The next morning McFarland told the servant girl that he had not slept a wink--that the devil seemed to be around his bed all night, and that he was so afraid that he did not dare to raise his head from beneath the covers. McFarland afterwards worked for one of the neighbors, was charged with burning some of his property, and suddenly made his escape.

Rem. Ditmars who married Helena was a grandson of John Johnson who emigrated from Ditmarsen in Denmark, and was living on a farm at Dutch Hill, Long Island, in 1640, hence the name Ditmars (formerly Ditmarsen). Two of his grandchildren Rem and Dowe, settled on a tract of land lying on the west side of the Millstone River, and running back from it for two miles to the neighborhood of Roysefield. Rem's part joined the River and remained in the family until about 1810, when, after the death of his son's widow it was purchased and resided on by Abraham Beekman until his death. Since that time his son Peter N. Beekman (uncle) has owned and resided on the old homestead. The land was owned by Jacob Schomp, adjoining it on the south, was a part of Rem's farm. Dowe lived in Royesfield. Rem. was an active member of the Reformed Church at Millstone at the time of its organization and the erection of its first house of worship in 1766. He had a son Peter, also an active member who lived on that part of the place now owned and resided on by Jacob Schomp. Living by the river, Jacob acquired great skill and speed as a skater. I heard his sister, my mother, relate that he at one time skated against a horse, commencing at Schenck's (now Oakley's Mills) and running to Millstone, the distance being two miles. Peter took the river, came to the end of the course, took off his skates and entered the tavern opposite the church before the horse and his rider arrived. Another singular incident connected with Peter is related. About five years ago (in 1870), in the neighborhood of old Ditmars property, a land turtle was seen marked with the initials P. D., 1766, which was doubtless done by him, and while his name carved on his tombstone has disappeared by the lapse of time the turtle has perpetuated it for more than a century and it probably still lives. In former times they were very numerous and it was a common practice, when finding a turtle for the finder to inscribe upon it the initials of his name together with the date.

Historical Notes

Number Nine - June 3

Johannes Van Liew had five sons, all of whom it appears, were soldiers in the Revolution; one of them died during that period. He suffered much from the depredations of the British in his property in various ways. Like many others in New Brunswick and its vicinity, the floors of his house and barn were torn up and taken to the city, and used in completing the bridge of boats constructed for the purpose of aiding the British Army in crossing the Raritan. He had one daughter, Ann, born July 19, 1769; died Oct. 27, 1847, who married her cousin, John D. Van Liew, born June 24, 1763; died Oct. 24, 1823, both of whom lived and died on the homestead. Their children were Dorothy, born June 13, 1793; died Nov. 21, 1833, and Ida - Dorothy never married. Ida married Feb. 18, 1817, Abram J. son of Jacques Voorhees of South Middlebush. Abram's great grandfather was the first settler there on three hundred acres of land, extending from the Middlebush Road to the Millstone River. His name was Abraham and was succeeded on the place by his son Jacques, who was born a cripple, for which he was generally called "Lame Jacques". He was a true Whig during the Revolution, and possessed extraordinary business capacity, dealt very largely in continental monnies, and was for some time County Treasurer. Besides managing a large farm successfully, over which he could only travel in his phaeton on account of his lameness. He kept a store in one end of his large house, was half owner of a vessel with John and James Wilson, called "The Favorite", which traded between New Brunswick and the Island of Madeira with produce, for which in return, besides other articles, they brought large quantities of wine. Voorhees' store was called a wine-store, of which he sold largely to the inhabitants of Somerset and Middlesex Counties. The wives of the surrounding farmers sent their butter with the Favorite to Madeira to market. Abraham Voorhees, the father of Jacques (Lame Jacques) was the great grandson of Steven Courten Van Voorhees, who with his family emigrated from (—?—) in Holland, in 1666, in the ship "Spotted Cow," and settled at Flatlands, Long Island.

From letters of correspondence between the first Voorhees families here, and their relations in Holland, their genealogy can be more correctly traced than any other family's coming from the Mother Country. These letters have been collected, and with the Voorhees coat-of-arms are carefully preserved by Hon. Teunis G. Bergen of Bay Ridge, L. I. - are written in the Dutch language, and are numerous. Through these and other means he has been enabled to obtain more information relating to the genealogies of the Holland families than any other person in the country.

Minna Van Voorhees, the great grandson of the emigrant, Stephen Courten, with four brothers and two sisters, came from Long Island and settled in and around New Brunswick in about 1717. Their descendants have become numerous and are found in almost every state of the Union. Albert Voorhees, formerly Lieut. Governor of Louisiana, and Daniel W. Voorhees, Ex-Congressman of Indiana, are descendants of families who resided in Middlesex Co., New Jersey. The Voorhees families increased with such rapidity that they furnished more soldiers (excepting the Smith's) to the American Army in the Revolution, than any other family in the state.

* INCORRECT - SEE P 175, P#6

The sons of Johannes Van Liew were as follows: Frederick, who lived and died at Three Mile Run; John, at Bound Brook; Denice, and Cornelius at the South Branch, and Hendrick who died during the Revolution.

Abraham J. Voorhees, who resided at Voorhees Station, which was named for him, is now in the eighty-first year of his age, has survived his wife, Ida, and is in possession of the old Van Liew homestead and property of the place, having put up three good and substantial new houses, with their out-buildings on the premises while residing on it.

Number 23

Adjoining Adrian Hagaman's house, and on the Somerset side of the old India Path, or old road of 1766, was the house of Gertie, widow of John Stryker who was the son of Garrett Stryker of Long Island, and who in 1712 purchased of Peter Cortelyou of New Utrecht, L. I. 300 acres of land for £300, lying between the old and the Middlebush roads.....

Gertie, wife of John Stryker, was the daughter of Frederick Hendrickson Van Liew of Jamaica, L. I., whose children were Mary, who married Jacob Probasco of New Jersey. Gertie married John Stryker who settled on the 300 acres of land at Six Mile Run as before referred to. Elizabeth, who married Evert Van Wincklen. Dinah who married Folkert Dierickson of New Jersey. Anolete (Aletie), the wife of John Doelant. Henry, Johannes, and Frederick who in 1716 married Helen Denice of the Narrows, L. I. Frederick settled in the land left him by his father in his will described as "All his lands lying in the Jerseys" and it is now owned by Abraham J. Voorhees of Three Mile Run, whose wife Ida, was the great great granddaughter of Frederick, son of Frederick Hendricksen Van Liew of Jamaica, as before stated.

The farmers throughout this whole section of the country were compelled to deliver over their stores into the hands of the British. At Three Mile Run the buildings were all plundered, and frequently fired. Barns were torn down to supply timber for the construction of a temporary bridge over the Raritan, and some of the most wanton cruelties were inflicted.

The following schedule of property taken from Mr. John Van Liew, of Three Mile Run, will illustrate the ruthless spirit of the enemy, and the hardships encountered by the inhabitants of this region during the war. The list is valuable as exhibiting the price of different articles at the commencement of the Revolution, a pound representing $2.50 of our currency. I only enumerate the more important articles taken by "the Regulars."

CEMETERY - JAMAICA, LONG ISLAND

Due to the fact that Frederick of 1670 who lived and died in Jamaica, and because the family undoubtedly ceased attending the church at Flatbush when the one was formed in 1702 (as evidenced by the fact that Frederick's oldest son, Johannes (2J1), had all his children baptized in Jamaica) the author of this book believes they were buried in the Prospect Hill Cemetery which today is the oldest existing cemetery in Jamaica, located a five minute walk from the intersection of Jamaica Avenue and 153rd Street.

Accordingly, the author visited that cemetery only to find that the oldest stones were dated 1718, 1722 and 1728. The inscriptions were barely legible in 1927 and there was in the immediate area, evidence of other graves that had no markings or whose markers had disintegrated or disappeared. It was, therefore, the author's opinion that Frederick of 1670 and Johannes (2J1) were buried in that area of the cemetery.

Subsequently, the author found at the Long Island Historical Society, a bound type written copy of a list of all the names on the headstones in the Prospect Cemetery. Under the name "van Lew" are the following:

Richard Van Lew died June 5, 1812, age 35 years 9 mos. 27 days.
Richard Van Lew, son of Frederick and Hannah Van Lew, died 24th April 1813 (no age).

John Van Lew died 29th June 1812, age 77 years 4 mos. 15 days.

John Van Lew Jr., born Sept. 2, 1769, died March 11th 1832.

Sarah, wife of John Van Lew born Nov. 23, 1781, died Sept. 18, 1856.

Mary Ann Van Lew died March 2, 1887, 87 years 4 mos. 21 days.

The above John who died in 1812, was then, born in 1735, and was undoubtedly eldest son of Frederick (3J4) and Mary Betts, while John Jr. was a son of John who died in 1812.

Richard Van Lew above who died in 1813, was a son of Frederick and Hannah Smith (unplaced) and was about 3 years old. Richard Van Lew who died in 1812, was probably a son of John Sr. and a brother of John Jr. above, as, from the register of funerals (see page 57) all went to the Grace Episcopal Church.

This establishes the fact that descendants of Frederick of 1670 were in 1812, using the Prospect Cemetery. It is probable that, judging by the custom at Three Mile Run and the Woodfern Cemeteries in N. J. where families of the Van Liews are all buried in the same part of the cemeteries, near each other, the same custom existed at the Prospect Cemetery at Jamaica, and, it is probable that where the above Van Lew members lie, also lie the father of John Sr. above, if he was interred at Jamaica and not in New Jersey, also the grandfather Johannes (2J/) and his wife, also the great grandfather Frederick of 1670 and his wife Dinah Janse. The graves of the earliest members were doubtless, either marked by field-stone markers, or by stones that have since weathered and crumbled away. Their graves, however, are no doubt close to those of the above "Van Lew" members.

The co-author of this book, not being entirely satisfied with the above meager findings, made some inquiries and discovered the reason for the aforementioned situation. It appears that in Jamaica, Brooklyn, Bushwick and Williamsburg, there were many small private burial grounds as still exist today in New Jersey where they had escaped the onslaught of progress by virtue of the fact that they are still in a rural area.

On Long Island, however, the cities grew at such a pace that these small private burial grounds operating without a license had to be removed and the occupants were reburied in larger cemeteries such as the Cypress Hills Cemetery and the Evergreen Cemetery. On a certain occasion, I am informed by the manager of the Cypress Hills Cemetery, that there were as many as five thousand individuals thus reburied at one time. The majority of the older gravestones being made of soft sandstone with shallow inscriptions carved thereon, are today impossible to read. Furthermore, many of the soft, brittle gravestones were broken in transit and were not reused at the new location.

Yes, the records exist in 1955, but they are not in alphabetical order and are kept in the third sub-basement of one of the large storage warehouses in New York and it would take many months of steady research and the expenditure of a substantial sum of money (to be paid to an attendant who would have to stand over the researcher's shoulder) in order to obtain the information desired.

In addition to the Prospect Hill Cemetery, there are two on Long Island that are very old and undisturbed, namely the Gravesend Cemetery and the Canarsie Cemetery. These are now under the jurisdiction of the Department of Parks and are only open to the public three days a year. These cemeteries are sufficiently far from Jamaica to have made it extremely unlikely that they were used by any of the descendants of Johannes (2J1).

CEMETERIES - NEW JERSEY

Three Mile Run Cemetery -

As early as 1703 the first Church south of the Raritan was established at the spot where this cemetery still exists. It was then on the Indian Path that became the Lincoln Highway, main road between New Brunswick and Trenton and is today (1956) Route 27. The cemetery is located a few hundred yards beyond where the Highway crosses the Millstone Branch of the Pennsylvania RR at Voorhees Station.

Opposite this cemetery stood the Homestead established in about 1717 by Frederick (2F1) and Helena de Nyse Van Lewe.

The AUTHOR had hunted everywhere for the graves of these two without result. Six cemeteries were carefully scrutinized in the process. When he stopped one day in front of the gate of the Three Mile Run Cemetery to get a list of all the Van Liews buried there he started with the grave stones of Johannes (3F8) and Dorothy Lott Van Liew and made the round of the entire cemetery (the yard only measuring about 130 feet square), eventually returning to his starting point.

It was then that he noticed three small, smooth, whitish stones in the same row as the above, flush with earth level. He assumed them to be of no consequence, merely three field stones in the ground, and was about to leave when an idea struck him. He secured a stick and started scratching the earth away from the front and top of the nearest stone. The letter "F" appeared. More scratching uncovered the symbol \sphericalangle . He had the initials FVL. He had found the stone of Frederick (2F1)!

The same was repeated with the stone to the right and again the initials FVL appeared. This was the stone of Frederick (3F5) who had died at age 31, two years after his father was buried.

The third stone was tried and again the symbol \sphericalangle appeared. This one was slanted and it was necessary to work a lot of earth away and rock it back and forth, when the letter "H" and the date 1784 became evident. It was the stone of Helena de Nyse.

Frederick Van Lewe (2F1) is probably the farthest back we can go of anyone buried in that cemetery tho there were undoubtedly others buried there between 1703 and when Frederick died in 1756.

The Van Liews buried in this Cemetery are (as per existing stones):

Frederick (2F1) - and his wife Helena de Nyse, - and his son Frederick (3F5). Also his fourth son Johannes (3F8) and his wife Dorothy Lott - and their eldest son Frederick (4F24) and his wife Ann Rappelyea and their only son John R. (5F55)	ALSO	Ann (4F27) dau of Johannes (3F8) who m, her cousin John D. (4F14) also their dau. Dorothy (5F51) and three Van Liew girls named Ann, Dinah and Idah the latter wife of Daniel Hendrickson.

SIX MILE RUN or The ELM RIDGE Cemetery.

This stands at the old site of the first six Mile Run Church which was an offshoot of the one of Three Mile Run and was established some ten or fifteen years later. Near here was the first Court House - the first County Seat of Somerset County, which same Court House was used by Middlesex County before it had one of its own.

The Cemetery is located on the left of Route 27 a short distance before entering Franklin Park. The Van Liews buried there are:

- (5) Frederick Hendricksen Van Leeuwen 1670
or Van Leeuw
or Van Lowe
or Van Leau
- (1) Jan Fredericksen Van Leeuwen in 1652

On December 6, 1664 was Bap. Cornelius Son of Hendrick Van Leeuwen. Catherine Van Leeuwen apparently emigrated from Holland and was, according to Bergen in the early settlers of Kings Co., N. Y., the wife of Dirk Stoffelsze Van Langstraet head of the Longstreet family.

Catherine Rugh is mentioned in Vol. 1 Abs. of Wills of New York, as the wife of Johannes Kerfbyl, a Doctor of Medicine in New York, the will refers to the marriage contract made before the Notary Public "Johannes Hendricksen Van Lawven (Leeuwen) at Amsterdam in Holland dated October 28, 1664, the said Johannes Hendricksen Van Lawven being cousin and guardian to his wife Catherine Rugh."

This Johannes Hendricksen Van Lawven was undoubtedly a brother of Frederick Hendricksen Van Liew, both being sons of Hendrick as shown by the "Sen". It is interesting to note that the first son of Frederick Hendricksen was named Johannes--probably after this brother.

Thomas Van Liewensen is mentioned in the list of members of the Dutch Ref. Church in New York in 1686 who are arranged by Domine Henrious Selyns in 1686 according to the streets of the City. "Langstraut (along the shore) (North Side of Pearl St. & Hanover Square to Wall St.) are given. Ceosje Barents widow of Thomas Van Liewensen. Catherine Van Liewens."
Nothing further is shown of either Thomas or Catherine than the above.

Cornelius Jacobsen Van Leeuwen was one of the passengers--some 45--on the boat La Boute Koe (The Spotted Cow) that arrived in New York in March 1660, this boat also bringing a company of soldiers, the first sent to New York. This Cornelius, the son of Jacob, as indicated by the name, came over in the employ of Roelof Swartwout (or Swortwoud) who lived at Kingston and who was there an agriculturist and who also held a Govt. position being a "Schout" in 1661 and a "Scheppen" in 1664 and who had been over and was returning from the Netherlands on this boat.

Three of the passengers on the La Boute Koe are listed as laborers of Swortwout. Van Leeuwen as in the employ of Swortwout, in what capacity is not stated.

Cornelius Jacobsen Van Leeuwen is not on the list of inhabitants of either Albany and its vicinity nor yet of Kingston, for that period, and it is, therefore, to be assumed that either he returned to Holland, or died, or was killed in the Indian Massacre that nearly wiped out all the inhabitants of Esopus (Wildwyck) now Kingston, New York.

Andries Pietersen Van Leeuwen or Andries, the son of Pieter Van Leeuwen, was undoubtedly a son of that Pieter Van Leeuwen mentioned previously as the Chief Prosecutor or Procureur General, of the Province of Utrecht (next to the highest legal position in the State), who was one of the three men who conducted about 1620 the famous trial of John Van Oldenbarneveltdt in which the Crowned Heads of all Europe were concerned, Prince Maurice of Nassau directly so.

Andries Pietersen Van Leeuwen's name is one of the names of the Dutch Settlers in Esopus that has been compiled from the old Court Records of Wildwyck (Kingston, N.Y.) under date of 1664. See----and ONWARD

TAKEN FROM "EARLY SETTLERS OF KINGS COUNTY"
BY TEUNIS G. BERGEN Pages 343, 344

Van Liew or Liewen, Jan Fredericks, emigrated in 1652 as per his marriage record, from Utrecht, having been probably at one period a resident of Leuwen, a village in Gelderland, on the Wasl in the Netherlands: married Aeltje Jans daughter of Jan Jansen. On Assessment Rolls of Brooklyn of 1675, 76, 83, 93. Deacon in the Reformed Dutch Church in 1683 and took the oath of Allegiance in Brooklyn in 1687. Issue Jan baptised Dec. 9, 1677. Margriet baptised Mar. 14, 1688. Abraham (married Elizabeth Krigier) Jan. 12, 1733 baptised July 9, 1682. Grietje baptised Apr. 20, 1685. Dina baptised Mar. 25, 1687. Esje baptised Nov. 10, 1689 Hendrick (who had three sons) baptised Apr. 30, 1694 and Elizabeth baptised Dec. 13, 1697 all in Kings County Church.

There was a Frederick Van Liew of Jamaica, Long Island who emigrated from Utrecht and had nine children, many of whose descendants are to be found in Somerset, N. J. and whose son Hendrick, baptised Oct. 14, 1689 married Apr. 18, 1713, Geertje Cortelyou of New Utrecht at which place he at one time probably resided.

In general, the descendants of Frederick Hendricksen van Leeuwen are eligible for membership in the following societies:

Colonial Wars
Sons of the American Revolution
Daughters of the American Revolution
Colonial Dames
The Huguenot Society of America
The Holland Society of New York

The Society of the Cincinnati requires one's ancestor to have been an officer of the Continental Line (not State Militia). The rules governing the line of descent are very strict. The privilege is passed from father to eldest son with certain exceptions when a daughter may pass the right of membership to her son. Any one interested is advised to read Bryce Metcalf's "The Original members and other officers eligible to the Society of the Cincinnati" - and then to contact the State Branch he aspires to join, for further clarification of his eligibility.

Frederick van Leeu (2F1) Member Capt. Wolsy's Company, Queens County, New York 1715.

The above three listings are to be found on pages 488, 537 & 496 respectively of "The Second Annual Report of the State Historian of the State of New York" dated Feb. 22-1897.

THE PATRIOTS OF THE American Revolution

During my research I was exposed to two DAR memberships based on van Liew RW ancestry. Both of these contained discrepancies, not of such a nature as to disqualify the member but to cause her considerable embarrassment had the line of descent been compared to this Record. I therefore resolved to clarify the "Who's who" in the Revolution to the best of my ability. Heretofore the only published records were Colonel Stryker's compendium of 1872 called "Jerseymen in the Revolution" and the "Genealogy and Annals of the Van Liew Family in America" by Thomas Lillian Van Liew published in 1910. In this little book the Author elaborates further on the names and the units with which they served, having obviously gotten additional information from the Dept. of Defense - State of N.J.

Having heard Dad mention that there had been 15 members of our family in the Revolution I paid the required sum to have reports prepared by the Department of Defense - State of New Jersey. These are reproduced exactly as received, the vital information having been cut out of each letter to permit flexibility of spacing and accommodate my own comments and conclusions. (ER. van L - 1956)

Please note - the letters from Colonel Brink are in quotes. My comments are initialed and the code numbers were inscribed by me.

Mr. E. R. van Liew
31 Macopin Avenue
Upper Montclair, New Jersey

Dear Sir:

As requested in application attached, there is given herein all information available in this office pertaining to the military record of the Cornelius Van Lew specified therein, who served from New Jersey during the period of the Revolutionary War, 1775-1783:

CORNELIUS VAN LEW - Somerset County.

4F9

Served as Private and Corporal, Somerset County Militia; received Certificates Nos. 1330, 1429 and 1502, amounting to £0:12:11, £1:2:1 and £0:12:11, respectively, for the depreciation of his Continental pay in the Somerset County Militia.

Records show that a Cornelius Van Lewe was granted £5:0:0 by the Legislature, October 8, 1778, for a gun lost in the service. This reference may apply to the foregoing soldier.

Very truly yours

A. M. ...

This record has been compiled under the Christian name "Dennis", and all information available in this office pertaining to such record is given herein in full:

DENNIS VAN LEW -

4F13

OR

4F26?

Served as Private, Captain James Moore's Company, SEE Second Regiment, Somerset County Militia, and BELOW First Regiment, Somerset County Militia, under Captain John Sebring and Lieutenant John Swaim;

in active service under Captain Moore, March 1 to 28, 1778, in a detachment of Captain Sebring's Company, commanded by Lieutenant Swaim, May 30, 1778, and under Captain Sebring, July 31 to August 23, 1780.

Received Certificates Nos. 158, 295, 506, 1392 and 1512, dated May 10, 1784, signed by William Verbryck, for £0:15:6, £0:11:8, £2:13:9, £1:17:6, and £0:12:1, respectively, for the depreciation of his Continental pay in the Somerset County Militia.

The above is Denice VL (4F13) whose grave in the South Middlebush Cemetery is marked with a DAR marker. Who then is the other Dennis (Denyse) VL listed by Colonel Stryker? He is Dennis (4F26) concerning whom we have the following:

1. Thomas L. Van Liew in his Genealogy and Annals of the Van Liew Family lists him as "Private", Somerset Co. Militia - Capt. John Sebring's Company. TLVL must have obtained this information from the Dept. of Defense, State of N.J. just prior to the year 1910.
2. The AUTHOR'S father JNvL (6F125) was 23 years old when his grandfather DVL (4F26) died at age 94. The old gentleman told his grandson of his experiences during the Revolution as a member of the Light Horse. (DVL-4F26 was hail and hardy when he died of sun stroke. He had insisted on breaking a colt to a racing sulky one hot July day - and it was this, not old age or disease that killed him)
3. We have this photograph of his gravestone taken in 1956:-

For the benefit of those who do not have a magnifying glass handy:

The Inscription

He possessed in unusual degree the traits necessary to constitute the good citizen. He was temperate, honest, peaceful, industrious, frugal and public spirited. In the war of the Revolution he repeatedly served on scouting parties as a light horseman. For many years previous to his death he was a professed Christian and his end was hopeful.

Stone is in the Woodfern private burial ground, on a farm owned by Walter Hoffman in this year, 1956. ERvL.

4. The Department of Defense, State of New Jersey, under date of 22 June 1956 advises they have eighteen references to the RW military record of one Dennis Van Lew showing Christian name spelled as follows:-

Four times as "Denice" - One time as "Denis" - Four times as "Denise" - One time as "Dennice" - Six times as "Dennis" - One time as "Dinnes" - One time as "Dinnis".

This in itself would indicate that more than one DVL had served, (witness the Fredericks that follow)

Despite the above evidence, The Department of Defense, State of N.J. insists it has only one record of a "Dennis Van Liew" as having served in the RW. This is based upon the fact that between the years 1875 and 1940 additional research was done by the Department, with the conclusion that Colonel Stryker must have been wrong when he listed cousins bearing the same given name (under different spellings) as having served in the same war. It also implies that what DVL (4F26) recounted to his grandson was a figment of his imagination. It finally implies that the inscription on the grave stone is a hoax. ERvL - 1956.

As requested in application attached, there is given herein all information available in this office pertaining to the military record of the Frederick (F) Van Lew specified therein, who served from New Jersey during the period of the Revolutionary War, 1775-1783:

FREDERICK F. VAN LEW -

4H13

Served as Private, Captain Lawrence Van Cleave's Company, Second Regiment, Somerset County Militia, and Captain John Stryker's Troop of Horse, Somerset County Militia; served from November 1776.

Inssofar as can be determined the above Frederick (F)-4J18 was the only one to have applied for a pension, with the result that the following was obtained by Mrs. Helen (Van Lew) Fluhr in 1935 from the Veterans Administration, Washington, D.C. (ERvL - 1956)

"The Revolutionary War record of Frederick Van Lew which follows was obtained from the papers on file in pension claim, S. 23035, based upon his service in that war.

Frederick Van Lew was born February 5, 1755 in Jamaica, Queens County, (on Long Island) New York, names of his parents not given.

While residing in said Jamaica in 1775, he belonged to the militia, and went "on a visit" to Goshen, Orange County, New York, while there, served one month as a private under Captain Stiles, then returned to his home, and later went to visit his brother and sister (their names not given) in Montgomery Township, Somerset County, New Jersey, and enlisted and served as private and second sergeant in Captain Lowe's company of New Jersey militia, was in the battle of Long Island and "on the 26th of December crossed over with the Army to Trenton" was in the battles of Trenton and Princeton, length of this service a little over five months; after which he served in monthly tours in the New Jersey militia, under Captains Baird, Badcock, and James Wheeler, and was in several skirmishes; again enlisted, served nine months in Captain Jonathan Phillips' company, Colonel Shreve's 2nd New Jersey regiment, was in the battle of Monmouth and an engagement at Springfield; he was also called out on many alarms and to stand guard, his service amounting in all to about three years.

He lived in Montgomery Township, New Jersey until in 1800, when he moved to Ovid (later called Lodi) Seneca County, New York. Pension was allowed on his application executed February 6, 1833, then living in Lodi, New York. He stated that while in the service, his name was Frederick Van Lew, but when he moved to Seneca County, New York, there was another man there by the same name, so he altered his name to Frederick F. Van Lew.

The soldier married December 31, 1788 in the state of New Jersey, Penelope Stout.

Record furnished in another letter for Frederick VAN LEW who served in the Third Regiment, Middlesex County Militia, and the Second Regiment, New Jersey Continental Line, is the only one shown to have served in grade of Private.

Under different variations of the spelling of the surname "Van Lew", it is shown that the following men named "Frederick" rendered service from New Jersey during the period of the Revolutionary War:

FREDERICK D. VAN LEIW - received from Sidney Berry, Quartermaster for Somerset County, New Jersey, Certificate No. 387, dated February 29, 1780, for $95.00, Continental.

FREDERICK VAN LEUWEN - received from Azariah Dunham, A.C.P., Certificate No. 313, dated September 14, 1780, for £153:0:0, Continental; Certificate No. 343, dated October 4, 1780, for £75:0:0, Continental, and Certificate No. 406, dated August 3, 1780, for £90:5:10, Continental. (It is also shown that an "Ann Van Leuwen" received from Azariah Dunham, A.C.P., Certificate No. 419, dated August 3, 1780, for £67:12:3, Continental.)

FREDERICK J. VAN LUE - received Certificate No. 1022, dated May 10, 1784, signed by William Verbryck, for £1:15:0, for the depreciation of his Continental pay in the Somerset County Militia.

It is my opinion that the first two Fredericks mentioned above were paid these rather substantial sums for supplies sold to the army. Whether the above Ann Van Leuwen is the same as the one who applied for a pension, it is impossible to find out.

|| Reference is made to the two applications which are attached, requesting search for records of other men named "Van Lew" who served during the Revolutionary War period.

The records of this office show a John Van Leive, a Jaques Van Lew and a Henry Van Liew as having rendered service from New Jersey during this war period. In order to assist you in your search, these three records are given herein in full:

JOHN LEIVE - received from Sidney Berry, Quartermaster for Somerset County, New Jersey, Certificate No. 399, dated February 29, 1780, for $24.00, Continental.

448
JAQUES VAN LEW - received Certificate No. 658, dated May 10, 1784, for £0:16:8, for the depreciation of his Continental pay in the Somerset County Militia.

HENRY VAN LIEW - received from Azariah Dunham, A.C.P., Certificate No. 39, dated July 20, 1780, for £112:19:4, Continental.

The misspelling of John's name above is doubtless due to some one having mistaken "Lewe" and changed the w to iv. Only Jaques' listing mentions service in the Militia.

THE SUBSCRIBERS

Thanks to the interest of the following Descendants & Friends the publication of this Record has become a reality. It is evident their thinking parallels that of Edmund Burke (1729-1797) who, in his "Reflections on the Revolution in France" Vol.VIII, said:

PEOPLE WILL NOT LOOK FORWARD TO POSTERITY,
WHO NEVER LOOK BACKWARD TO THEIR ANCESTORS.
